Reagan prepares cooperation offer

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — President Reagan will propose today a new formula for U.S.-Soviet cooperation in resolving regional disputes in Afghanistan and elsewhere, U.S. officials disclosed Wednesday.

Meanwhile, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes announced that Reagan would meet Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze this afternoon after meeting with the lesders of five major industrialized democracies.

The officials said Reagan's proposal, to be outlined in a major foreign policy address to the United Nations, would contain, a framework for U.S.-Soviet cooperation in settling civil conflicts that have torn such nations as Afghanistan, where 100,000 Soviet troops are buttressing a pro-Moscow government, and Nicaragua, which Reagan contends Soviet bloc countries are using to expand Communist influence in Central America.

Speaking on condition they not be named, the officials said the plan Reagan would outline has become the focus of U.S. negotiating aims for Reagan's summit talks Nov. 19-20 in Geneva with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Speakes, talking to reporters earlier as Reagan flew to New York for three days of talks during ceremonies marking the 40th anniversary of the U.N. General Assembly, said the president would propose a major new initiative to be discussed at his summit meeting with Gorbachev.

Reagan chatted briefly with Shevardnadze as the Soviet foreign minister moved through the receiving line at a reception the U.S. president and his wife gave for world leaders attending the United Nations celebrations.

After greeting some 60 guests, the president stepped aside for a private conversation with Shevardnadze and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

Speakes then told reporters Reagan "appreciated" the letter from Gorbachev that Shevardnadze delivered to the White House on Sept. 27. In it, the Soviet leader proposed a 50 percent reduction in nuclear missiles and warheads on both sides.

Although U.S. officials have stressed an American weapons-reduction offer already was on the bargaining table in Geneva, there have been hints the United States was preparing a new U.S. response to Gorbachev.

The followup meeting with Shevardnadze was set for late afternoon in Reagan's suite at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and was scheduled to last 30 minutes. It was to be followed by a two-hour breakfast meeting Friday between the Soviet foreign minister and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Speakes said Shevardnadze thanked Reagan for providing a U.S. helicopter to speed the foreign minister's arrival at the reception. Shevardnadze flew into a nearby airport from a meeting of Warsaw Pact nations in Sofia, Bulgaria, and Shultz had said earlier he wasn't sure the Soviet official would arrive in time for the U.S. reception.

The conversation appeared amiable to onlookers, and at one point Dobrynin complained in jest that 7:30 a.m. was too early for breakfast with Shultz. Reagan reminded the veteran ambassador to the United States it would be mid-day in Moscow.

Reagan also shook hands with Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega as the Sandinista chief went through the receiving line with other foreign leaders. But it was a noticeably cool encounter.

Older males lead suicide list in Idaho

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

Teenage threat — A2

TWIN FALLS — Middle-aged and elderly males in Idaho commit suicide at a higher rate than teenagers, according to a study just released by the Idaho Bureau of Vital Statistics.

In addition, of the 155 Idahoans who committed suicide in 1984, approximately 80 percent were males, compared to the national average of 73 percent. Counties with the highest rates per population were in central and northern Idaho, where the economically depressed timber and mining industries are based. The study also pinpointed patterns of suicide unique to the West, including more use of firearms both by men and women.

The study of 1982-84 suicide rates is the first comprehensive study on suicide by the state bureau, and is included in its Annual Report on Vital Statistics, released Wednesday.

"We were very surprised at the lack of increase in teen suicides because of all the publicity on the subject," said Janet Wick, a statistician who did the bureau's study.

Although public and media attention focused on the problem of teen suicides during the last year, the vital statistics study found teen-age suicides in Idaho are not on the rise.

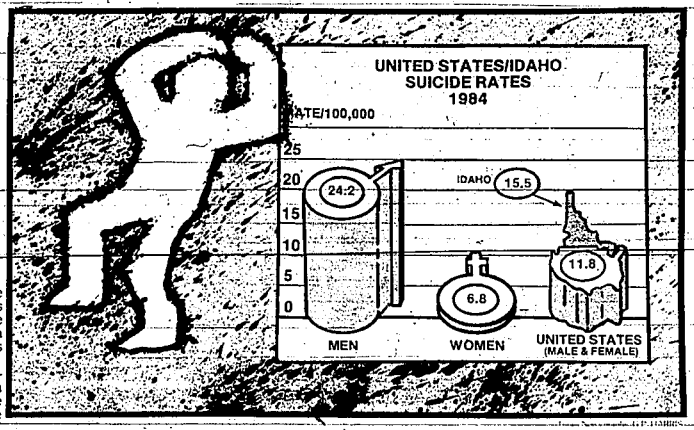

There was a "small, steady increase in 10-14 year-old male suicides, but the absolute numbers are small," the study said.

"What stuck out instead were the higher rates in the northern counties, where timber and mining are the major industries," Wick said.

Because the bureau's report was a statistical study and not an analysis into why the rates were so high, Wick said it would be "speculation at this point," tying the higher rates in the northern counties to a loss of jobs. "But it is interesting," she said.

Suicides are the seventh-leading cause of death in Idaho, compared to the 10th-leading cause in the nation.

In a separate study not included in the report, the bureau also pulled together the methods of suicide and found a majority of both men and women in Idaho kill themselves with firearms more often than in the rest of the nation.

The Idaho figures were a 73 percent use of firearms by men and 47 percent use by women, compared to 63 percent nationally by males and 39 percent by women.

Other methods of suicide in Idaho included gas or carbon monoxide poisoning — 11 percent for men and 18 percent for women; hanging, strangulation or suffocation — 11 percent for men and 4 percent for women; and drug overdoses, 3 percent for men and 23 percent for women.

Wick said that between 1970-83 the use of firearms by women jumped 50 percent, and was a "notable" increase.

"In the past more women attempted suicide by gas poisoning or overdoses," Wick said. "The use of guns indicates a more lethal method, with fewer chances of rescue. It's not just a cry for help or attention."

The study also shows that Idaho

Frozen potatoes 'on hold'

Idaho officials act to protect market

The Associated Press
and The Times-News

BOISE — With some frosted potato crops evident in eastern Idaho, Idaho Director of Agriculture Dick Rush has ordered state inspectors to hold back any potatoes they suspect may have been damaged by freezing.

The order strengthens the authority of inspectors to keep tainted potatoes from getting to the nation's markets.

More importantly, it sends a message to customers that Idaho intends to ensure the quality of this year's crop, industry sources are saying.

Rush issued the order Wednesday morning. "We have a high quality potato crop this year and we don't want to do anything to damage that," he said.

Parts of the state — particularly eastern Idaho — were hit by frosts before farmers could dig the spuds out of their fields. The amount of damage is uncertain, industry sources say.

"The problem is, we don't know how much of it (the crop) is bad. We don't even know right now what percentage of this is frost damage. There's all types of speculation," says Dave Smith, executive vice president of the Idaho Grower Shippers Association, which represents the state's 65 packers and shippers.

Rush estimates it will affect less than 1 percent of the state's 1985 crop.

Potatoes hurt by frost or by chilling do not show the damage when they come out of the fields. It takes several days of storage at temperatures above freezing to discover it, Gary Kleinschmidt, potato specialist and pathologist with the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension office at Twin Falls says.

If the potatoes are inspected and shipped before damage is apparent, the frozen potatoes can decay while they are on the way to buyers. A few bad potatoes also can nourish

Inflation rate steady

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The fifth straight 0.3 percent monthly increase in the government's Consumer Price Index means inflation is running at such a slow pace that Social Security recipients will get their smallest cost-of-living raise since benefits were tied to inflation.

Moreover, the September retail price measure reported Wednesday by the Labor Department added the final figure to a federal income tax "indexing" formula that will translate to a barely noticeable change in the average American's 1986 taxes.

The 3.7 percent tax indexing change — based on comparing fiscal 1985 inflation to 1984 — will result in the $1,040-per-person income tax exemption rising to $1,080 for returns filed in 1987. The standard deduction for single people will go from $2,390 to $2,480 and for couples from $3,540 to $3,670.

Tax table brackets will be widened by the same 3.7 percent so more income will be taxed at lower rates.

The 3.1 percent Social Security benefit increase based on a slightly different set of statistics works out to a $14 monthly increase for the average recipient starting Jan. 1.

In all, the modest changes are a reflection of analysts' months-long assertions that inflation is no longer a major factor in the U.S. economy.

Congress seeks lid on red ink

By STEVEN KOMAROW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress shifted its focus Wednesday from balancing future deficits to limiting red ink now with legislation President Reagan threatens to veto because it includes tax increases.

Omnibus bills being debated in the House and Senate would make spending cuts, tax hikes and other changes needed to limit the estimated deficit this year to about the $171 billion allowed in the fiscal 1986 budget.

Tax increases in the main Senate bill and also expected in House legislation have prompted the threat of a presidential veto.

The Senate bill would keep the cigarette tax at 16 cents, impose a new industry tax to pay for cleaning up toxic waste sites, and put a duty on imports to pay for a program to retrain workers who lose jobs to foreign competition.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan told the Senate last week that "the president opposes such tax increases."

"I believe it is imperative for you to know that if some of the bill's provisions are not deleted, the president's advisers will recommend that he not sign it," Regan said.

But despite the veto threat, the Senate on Tuesday gave tentative approval to the tobacco levy, which would have dropped back to 8 cents on Nov. 14 under present law.

The measure also would impose federal taxes of about 2 cents per tin of snuff or three-ounce package of chewing tobacco. Objections from tobacco-state lawmakers have been softened by attaching a new program of price supports for tobacco farmers.

The House is also considering keeping the 16-cent cigarette tax, but with a penny earmarked for tobacco programs and without the snuff and chewing tobacco levies. A tax for toxic waste cleanup is also on the House agenda, though the Ways and Means Committee has not settled on its final form.

The Senate bill would cut $85 billion from the deficits over the next three years, about $8 billion more than the House would save in its legislation.

The House opened debate on its main bill Wednesday, a grab-bag measure that also includes the entire 200-page-plus Housing Act of 1985, revisions in retirement laws, and a provision raising criminal penalties for certain contract frauds.

LDS officials say talks with bombing suspect not 'sinister'

Elder Dallin Oaks, President Gordon B. Hinckley and Elder Hugh Pinnock, from left, told of discussions of historic documents at news conference Wednesday in Salt Lake City

By MICHAEL WHITE
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Mormon Church leaders said Wednesday there was nothing "sinister and underhanded" about their meetings with bombings suspect Mark Hofmann regarding a purported treasure-trove of historical documents.

Responding to news accounts of two fatal bombings apparently linked to trafficking in early Mormon records, church officials held a rare news conference at church headquarters to detail their dealings with the man police describe as their prime suspect.

"In the glare and innuendo of publicity accompanying the recent investigation, a normal, though confidential, transaction has been made to appear sinister and underhanded," said Dallin Oaks, a member of the church's Council of the Twelve Apostles.

"My own contact with it has been seen as mysterious and questionable. I therefore welcome the opportunity to set the public record straight," said Oaks, who met with Hofmann on Oct. 15 just hours after the bombings.

Hofmann, 31, who had been involved in trading or selling some 40 documents to the church since 1980, was in satisfactory condition recovering from injuries sustained in a third bombing Oct. 16, which police believe was accidental.

Police have speculated that Hofmann may have planted the bombs to hide possible forgery or double-dealing relating to his business as a respected but financially strapped dealer in historical documents. No charges have been filed against Hofmann.

Gordon B. Hinckley, a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' governing First Presidency, said Hofmann offered in June to donate a collection of letters, diaries and ancient papyri he called the McLellin papers.

Hinckley said he had not been aware previously of such a collection. He said he told Hofmann he would be interested in talking further once Hofmann had acquired the papers and paid off a $150,000 loan he had acquired from another dealer for the transaction.

"I always had some doubt about the McLellin collection" because the church's historical department knew nothing of it, said Hinckley, who runs the church's daily affairs for ailing President Spencer W. Kimball.

Hinckley and Oaks denied the church had offered money for the papers of William E. McLellin, an early church apostle who was excommunicated in 1838. Hinckley said the church was under divine mandate to acquire historical docu-

Suicide threats among teens, youngsters growing problem

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although teenage suicide rates are not abnormally high in Idaho, the problem of child suicide is great, according to a local therapist.

"Teen suicide has doubled, both in the nation and in Idaho, in the last 10 years," Dr. Hal Myers, a pediatrician and child psychiatrist, said Wednesday. "We have significant numbers of threats from junior high kids, even threats from elementary students."

Myers said he recently had to admit a 7-year-old in Twin Falls to the hospital after an unsuccessful suicide attempt.

"The child said 'Nobody loves me,' and that is not atypical," Myers said. "Teen-agers feel badly at the loss of a boyfriend or girlfriend. They don't have good peer relationships, and there's not a lot of success in their lives."

But Myers, who has practices both in Twin Falls and Boise, said he is also noticing an increase in talk of suicide among better students, who are pushing themselves harder in school.

"One girl came in and was depressed because she'd made her first 'B', and she thought it would prevent her from getting into the college she wanted to go to," he said.

Myers said there are definite signs parents and teachers or counselors can spot when children and teenagers seem unusually depressed. Relationships with friends and peers, how often they talk about suicide, and the methods they discuss are warning signs. Teens who consider using a gun or drowning themselves are at greater risk than those who talk about suicide by pills or knives, Myers said.

Suicide

males, especially middle-aged to elderly men, commit suicide at a rate nearly one-third higher than the U.S. average.

"In fact, between 1970 and 1983, the middle-year-male rates increased at a greater pace, and rates of the 15-24 year-old males actually declined," the study said.

For example, men between the ages of 40-49 had an 85-percent suicide rate for the three-year study. The rate dropped slightly for men between the ages of 50-59. Of the 60 people in that age group who committed suicide, 43, or 72 percent, were male.

The rate jumps back up to 84 percent for men between the ages of 60-79 years old. And of the 13 people aged 80 and over who committed suicide between 1982-84, all were male.

Phil Grover, regional program supervisor for the Mental Health Services office in Twin Falls, said other studies have shown that middle-aged and elderly men who are recently divorced or widowed are a greater risk to take their own lives.

"A contributing factor to suicide is isolation," Grover, a psychologist, said. "People who commit suicide feel they have special problems, or they can't cope, and there's no one around to give good advice."

Grover said it was "a cultural myth" that people in small, conservative, family-oriented communities were less likely to commit suicide.

The problem actually intensifies in smaller communities because there are fewer places to go for help, and people "feel more isolated, more embarrassed that everyone's going to know their problems," he said.

"The cultural tendency in Idaho, and all Western states, is for men to do things by themselves and for themselves, and that's an unrealistic, idealistic standard," he said. "When a man becomes depressed or gets into a situation he can't get out of, he feels he should be able to cope by himself. Then he becomes desperate."

Despite the farm crisis, Grover shied away from placing rural farmers in a greater risk group. He said he thought the new Crisis Hotline for farmers would help alleviate a lot of pressure.

"I think it's going to give them a feeling that other people are going through the same things, and there are people to help," he said.

Getting help to the people who need it, however, is the hardest aspect of suicide prevention, according to Dr. Marv Miller, a California psychiatrist recognized nationally as an expert on suicide and suicide prevention.

Miller said people seriously considering suicide "do not let their fingers do the walking through the Yellow Pages" for help.

He said there were two recent studies completed on crisis prevention centers, one in St. Louis and the other in Los Angeles, both of which handled 10,000 calls a year. Of those 10,000 calls to each center, only 3 percent were life-threatening. The rest who called were depressed, but not despondent, and were "ambivalent" about committing suicide.

"We have very well-intentioned, very well-trained people who have set up networks and suicide prevention services, and then they wait to be contacted," Miller said. "It's an inefficient system."

Miller has given suicide prevention seminars throughout Idaho for mental health professionals and teachers, counselors and medical people to help them better identify people who consider suicide the best of all possible solutions.

"A lay person can recognize warning signals and how to intervene," said Betsy Gable, director of the Mental Health Association in Boise. "The best method of prevention is intervention."

Strong winds batter Western states

By The Associated Press

High winds battered several Western states Wednesday, with gusts as high as 69 mph reported in Montana, and heavy rain flooded some city streets in Iowa.

Rain and thunderstorms also were reported from the Atlantic Coast, across the South and in the Pacific Northwest, with flash-flood watches posted in Louisiana.

Today's weather

Sunshine, warmer readings coming up

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:

Partly cloudy and a little warmer today and Friday. Highs upper 50s to mid-60s both days. Lows tonight mid-30s. Winds 5 to 15 mph.

Camas Prairie, Hailey and the Lower Wood River Valley:

Partly cloudy today and Friday. A few patches of morning valley fog. Highs 50 to 55 both days. Lows tonight 25 to 30.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Utah — Mostly fair today and Friday with a continuing warming trend. Lows 35 to 45. Highs today 60s and lower 70s and Friday upper 60s and 70s.

Nevada — Fair with warm days today through Friday. Lows at night mostly mid-20s to mid-30s. Highs both days mid-60s to mid-70s.

Synopsis:

Scattered light showers continued over west and north Idaho on Wednesday afternoon.

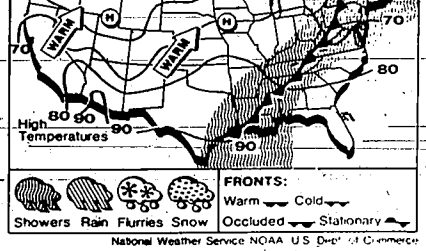

Precipitation amounts from these showers were light. Showers will return to the north Thursday as a fast-moving storm system sweeps through the region.

Midafternoon temperatures ranged from the 30s to the low 60s with the highest temperature in the state Wednesday 65 degrees at Hagerman. Elk City recorded the low of 26 degrees.

The agricultural forecast for Southern Idaho: Conditions for field work and harvesting will be good through the period today through Monday except for Saturday when a few delays may occur due to showers. Total precipitation through the period will be .10 inch or less. Soil temperatures for the potato harvest will fall below 45 degrees by midnight and rise above 45 degrees by afternoon both today and Friday.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho, Saturday through Monday, indicates widely scattered showers Saturday with a chance of mountain showers in the north portion Sunday and Monday. Highs mid-50s to mid-60s. Lows in the 30s to low 40s.

Elsewhere in the nation on Wednesday, the high of 90 degrees was reported at Ft. Myers, Fla., and the low of 13 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

bacteria powerful enough to rot other, healthy potatoes around them, Kleinschmidt says.

The solution is to hold the spuds in storage long enough to make sure they have not sustained frost or chill damage, he says.

Rush's order on Wednesday does not increase the powers of 962 federal-state inspectors now at work checking the Idaho potato crop. They already can prevent shipment of damaged crops or hold crops that might be damaged from freezing conditions, said Max Huntsman, manager for the Idaho and Eastern Oregon Potato Committee, which administers the federal marketing order for potatoes.

But it does send a strong signal to prospective buyers of Idaho potatoes.

"All Dick Rush is doing is assuring the trade that we are taking extra precautions to make sure everything they're getting is meeting Idaho quality standards," said Smith.

That assurance can be important in competition with potatoes from other parts of the country, says Paul Patterson, extension economist based in Idaho Falls, who tracks potato markets.

"The market reacts to rumors, and other states who may not have been impacted by this cold snap and also are moving potatoes into a given market, they will take advantage of information like this to the greatest extent. We would do the same thing," he says.

If buyers receive bad shipments, they could quickly turn away from Idaho as a supplier of potatoes this year, industry sources say.

Some small quantities of tainted potatoes may have escaped into shipping channels so far. But the frost damage does not appear to have discouraged buyers, Smith says.

Pete Salpietra is manager of C.H. Robinson Co. in Louisville, Ky., one company that buys and distributes Idaho spuds. "We've had a few (damaged shipments), but nothing any different than any other years. I feel the shippers have done a very good job in picking and choosing what they're shipping." He says Rush's action will boost the confidence of buyers who hear about frost-affected crops.

Rush's order is unusual. Rick Phillips, assistant to Rush, says state agriculture officials could find no record of a similar order and had to "start from scratch" to write it. The emergency order remains in effect until Nov. 30.

Buyers, shippers and growers will get the first reliable estimate of the frost damage and of the size of the state's crops this year on Nov. 12, when the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service releases its first potato projection for the year. It is based on the condition of the crop as of Nov. 1.

ments, but always had done so legally and from reputable dealers.

Oaks said he was approached in late June by another church official, Hugh Pinnock, about the possibility of the church loaning $185,000 to Hofmann to buy the collection. Oaks refused, but said he authorized Pinnock to arrange a private loan for Hofmann at First Interstate Bank, where Pinnock is a board member.

Oaks said he was not aware at the time of Hofmann's earlier conversation with Hinckley, who was then out of town, or of the $150,000 loan to Hofmann from Salt Lake coin dealer Alvin Rust.

Pinnock said he'd been told either by Hofmann or Steven L. Christensen that the loan from Rust was for the purchase of a different document and that the McLellin collection had been pledged as collateral.

Christensen, 31, a history buff who had bought other documents from Hofmann, was killed in the first blast at his downtown office. The second bomb, three hours later killed Kathy Sheets, 50, wife of Gary Sheets, an associate of Christensen's who police believe was the intended victim. Christensen and Sheets were Mormon bishops.

Oaks said he agreed to meet for the first time with Hofmann just hours after the bombings.

"We exchanged expressions of shock at the two bombings that had taken place that morning," Oaks said. "Hofmann said he thought the police would want to question him. He said he was worried about what he should say to them.

"I told him he should just answer their questions and tell them the truth," said Oaks, adding he then asked Hofmann, "You don't have any reason to believe this bombing has anything to do with you, do you?"

He said Hofmann denied any knowledge of the explosions.

Oaks said he had been told by Pinnock and an unidentified potential buyer that Hofmann had the McLellin papers in a safe-deposit box held jointly with Rust and that Hofmann planned to close a sale of the collection the day of the bombings. When Christensen was killed, the deal was postponed, Oaks said.

Police say four people either paid or promised to pay for the McLellin papers. But detectives have found no evidence Hofmann ever had possession of the documents, if they exist. The papers were not among documents found in Hofmann's bombed-out car, as originally believed, police said.

Rust claimed Tuesday that Hinckley had agreed to buy the McLellin papers for $300,000. Rust said he had given Hofmann $150,000 in April to purchase the documents.

Home Federal's Adjustable Rate Mortgage Makes Sense!
Fixed rate mortgages are out of reach for many people today due to high interest rates. The consequences of many adjustable rate mortgages could be disasterous for the homeowner a year or so down the line. Our adjustable mortgage makes sense because:
• Lower interest rate makes it affordable.
• You are protected if interest rates rise.
1. Interest rate increases for the life of the loan are limited.
2. Interest rate increase in any one year is limited.
3. A part of every payment you make is guaranteed to reduce your loan balance.
4. Your loan is assumable by a credit worthy buyer if you decide to sell.
5. There is no prepayment penalty.
We'd like to talk to you about our adjustable home mortgage that's affordable and protects you in the years to come!

Tax increase receives push

LEWISTON (AP) — Educators and business people told Idaho legislators Tuesday night that a tax boost was necessary, but the disagreed on where the increases should be made.

More than 140 people turned out for the first of five hearings on the proposed Idaho Economic Recovery Act of 1986, sponsored by Democrats Larry EchoHawk of Pocatello and Tim Tucker of Porthill and Republicans Don Loveland of Boise and L. Ed Brown of Pocatello. A dozen other state legislators from north central counties also attended.

Nevalon Lang, representing the Greater Lewiston Chamber of Commerce, said the entire tax structure needs to be rewritten and the chamber recommends a task force be appointed by the 1986 session.

She said the chamber opposes extending the sales tax to services, and suggested that the money instead be made up through the income tax or a state lottery.

Welfare cuts recommended

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare is recommending $1.78 Million in budget cuts that would result in the loss of $2 million in matching funds from the federal government.

Health and Welfare Director Rose Bowman is recommending the budget cuts to comply with the order to all state agencies from Gov. John Evans to cut spending by 2.5 percent to cope with a revenue shortfall.

The spending holdback recommendations sent to Evans' office last week would include cutting $462,200 in state medical assistance. That would cause the loss of $1 million in matching funds, said department spokeswoman Lindy High.

Budget cuts in other welfare programs would mean the loss of an additional $1 million in federal matching funds, officials said. The Division of Welfare would lose $387,900 for adult assistance and aid to famililies with dependent children.

Association rejects BSU grant

BOISE (AP) — Apparently fearing another controversy over the projects it decides to back financially, the Association for the Humanities in Idaho has rejected a request for just over $18,000 to help process the papers of the late Idaho Sen. Frank Church.

Executive Director Tom McClanahan officially said the Boise State University grant request was turned down because the project would not allow enough public participation.

But association board members in rejecting the request expressed mounting concern that their involvement in the project would only result in the same kind of controversy that surrounding the association's financial backing of Russian Awareness Week at the school two years ago.

Lawyers pin losses on bad investment

BOISE (AP) — If liability insurance companies are losing money, it's because of their own mismanagement and bad investments, not because of soaring jury awards, Idaho trial lawyers say.

The Idaho Trial Lawyers Association told a news conference here it is launching an investigation into insurance company finances, seeking better information on why insurance companies are losing money.

Professional people such as doctors and lawyers, companies and governmental units ranging from sewer districts to the state of Idaho have been threatened in recent weeks with loss of liability insurance coverage.

Ken Pedersen, Twin Falls, president of the lawyers' association, said many insurance companies have been asking up to 400 percent increases in premiums, or are dropping coverage.

A state task force has worked out an agreement with some companies to continue coverage until the end of the year.

But Pedersen said the insurance companies invariably claim huge losses, resulting from soaring judgments in personal injury lawsuits.

Although there has been an increase in such judgments, he said, it appears the real reason there is a crisis in the liability insurance industry is because insurance companies have been losing money on investments.

There has been talk of a "cap" on personal injury lawsuits, or some other action to limit personal injury awards.

Deputy seeks treasury post

BOISE (AP) — Shawn de Loyola of Boise announced Wednesday that he's running for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer next year.

De Loyola, 33, a political unknown who is senior deputy treasurer under Marjorie Ruth Moon, admits it will be difficult to get his name as well-known as the present office-holder.

De Loyola said Miss Moon has been an excellent state treasurer, and he plans to continue her policies.

In an announcement speech just outside the treasurer's office at the Statehouse, De Loyola said his experience will aid his campaign.

Idahoans' names on list

BOISE (AP) — A change in U.S. Defense Department policy means the names of two Idahoans who were killed in Vietnam on U.S. Air Force missions can be inscribed on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., officials say.

The names of Staff Sgt. Clyde A. Crow of Boise and Maj. Raymond L. Tacke of Cottonwood are among 96 to be added to the memorial. Both men died in plane crashes outside Vietnam while on combat missions. Crow died May 19, 1966, and Tacke on March 8, 1969, according to the Department of Defense.

The names of Crow and Tacke were not initially inscribed on the monument because of the definition of "combat casualty" originally used by the Defense Department for the memorial.

Death accidental

BOISE (AP) — Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg has ruled the gunshot death of a Kuna teenager accidental.

Sonnenberg says his investigation into the death last weekend of Jason Lee Mann, 15, showed that the boy was apparently playing with a gun when it went off.

Replacing old jail should be the goal

It should come as no surprise to Twin Falls County residents that two inmates at the county jail have gone to court, asking that the 70-year-old facility be shut down because it violates the inmates' constitutional rights.

The court filing may be, in fact, an "I told you so" for the county commissioners, who tried and failed to convince county residents in March to approve a $6.2 million bond issue for a new jail facility. That proposal was overwhelmingly defeated, despite arguments that a suit like the one filed Tuesday would almost certainly result.

The case may also precipitate the actions which everyone knows are needed.

In March, we said there was an obvious need for a new county jail. But we spoke out against the specific proposal on the grounds that it was too expensive and included design and use elements for which no solid case had been made.

But those arguments then, as now, do not negate the county's need for a modern jail. We do not welcome the lawsuit, but it will again force attention on this compelling issue.

The direction the county commissioners should take, in our view, is clear. Since the suit has clear merit, the county should not waste taxpayers money in a concerted effort to blunt it. Rather, they should ask for time, then lay plans to put another bond proposal for a new jail before the voters which meets the objections.

Specifically, we support the following:

•A new jail, located out of the downtown area, or at least not on prime land across from City Park. A design should be provided to the community in advance, as should schematic drawings which commit the county to building a jail which fits the community architecturally.

One main reason the March proposal failed was that people weren't provided a clear picture of what they were buying. We don't need a concrete block and barbed wire "Stalag 17" for a county jail facility.

•A facility limited to jail uses. There is no demonstrated need, as yet, for new offices for the sheriff, prosecutor, public defender and civil defense, and certainly not for a nuclear center in the basement from which to handle civil emergencies. Leave these out.

•A moderate cost. County residents simply balked at the $6.2 million price tag. We think a complete, Class B jail can be built for less than this. We do not need a class A facility with extensive recreation yards and other amenities.

After all, folks, this is a jail. It doesn't need to be the Ritz. And if we make it too posh, there's a good chance the state will start dumping prisoners into it to alleviate state overcrowding. Who wants long-term felons being held here?

The suit will not correct problems. But if it is handled right now, it can help bring about a decent, moderate jail for Twin Falls County to replace the aging, dangerous firetrap we now have. That should be the county's goal.

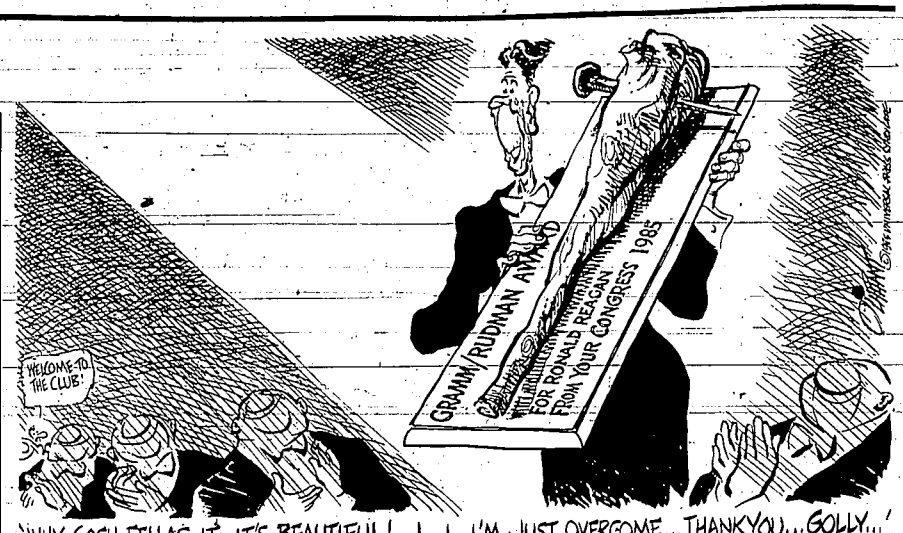

Comment on forest plans

Deadlines are rapidly approaching on two public comment periods for the Magic Valley's closest national forests, Challis and Sawtooth, which will help set public policy on both for years to come.

The Challis Forest plan comment deadline is Friday. The Sawtooth plan deadline is Nov. 5.

Each contains spectacular wilderness, and each is subject to competing pressures from recreational users of many stripes, timber, mining potential and ranching, as well as natural habitat for fish and wildlife. Both areas are important as tourist attractions.

Regardless of how you feel about various aspects of either plan, now is the time to be heard. Challis comments can be sent to Challis National Forest, Box 404, Challis, Idaho, 83226. Sawtooth comments should go to Sawtooth National Forest, 1525 Addison Ave. E., Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

Finance understood in Middle Ages

George Will

WASHINGTON — It is said we owe to the Middle Ages humanity's two most destructive inventions — gunpowder and romantic love.

But let this be said for the Middle Ages: People understood government. They especially understood that kings (read: Presidents) not parliaments (read: Congress) are the principal impediments to reasonable public finance.

Kings were constantly siphoning off the nation's wealth to build palaces, or liberate Jerusalem or, even more peculiarly, to explore what was to become Florida. Parliaments tried to pull the purse strings.

After 500 years of enlightenment, there is less understanding. Americans think Congress is the big deficit-maker. Never mind Lyndon Johnson's guns-and-butter choice, and never mind Ronald Reagan's guns-and-tax cuts choice. And never mind that while Reagan has been presiding over the production of more than half of this nation's federal debt, he has not found much to veto on budgeting grounds. This is because Congress has spent about what he has requested. And Congress has enacted as many balanced budgets as he has submitted.

Of course, Presidents veto for other than budgetary reasons. Still, it is indicative that FDR averaged 43 vetoes a year, Eisenhower 23, and Reagan in his first term only 10 a year. Ten of this century's 15 Presidents have used the veto more regularly than Reagan. But as this is written he is threatening to veto something, in part because of a provision that would reduce the deficit and cancer.

In 1951, the tax on a pack of cigarettes was put at eight cents. In 1982, it was raised to 16 cents, which because of inflation was much less in 1982 than eight cents was in 1951. The 1982 law stipulated a return to eight cents. However, one provision of the current deficit-reduction effort is to keep the tax at 16 cents. This provision was included in exchange for lavish tobacco subsidies.

Much of the deficit-reduction bill rests on cooked books yielding fudged numbers. The reduction number of $85.6 billion over three years is highly suspect. The $4.9 billion from the tobacco tax is real. This will increase the annual cost of smoking-related diseases, which now stands at $35 billion.

This is tax folly compounded.

Folly is compounded, then cubed. The administration knows taxes alter incentives and believes they should be used to encourage behavior that is socially useful, such as saving and investing. Yet it wants to drive down a tax (on cigarettes) that discourages a behaviorally related disease.

Taxes . . . cancer. Let's talk about something else. Like AIDS.

The public has been told, repeatedly, that AIDS is the nation's foremost public-health problem. Many other problems have higher costs in suffering, death and economic loss.

Many of these other problems are grounded in irrational behavior: drug (including alcohol) abuse, reckless driving, diet-related heart disease, lung cancer. But AIDS cases, we are told, are going to increase "exponentially." Maybe.

Intellectuals who postulate trends, and professions who respond to them, have emotional and vocational stakes in the exaggeration of the trends: What Americans apparently can not learn is the knack of reducing the ruinous by-product of American democracy: deficits.

Because we have learned to connect clear causes and effects, we know that if the administration successfully insists on rolling back the cigarette tax, it will thereby increase the deficit by reducing revenues, and by increasing federal medical expenditures — and by increasing what is already the fastest-growing component of the budget: interest charges.

What's that, you say? The Graham-Rudman-Hollings bill will scrub away deficits by "requiring" five annual cuts? It might — unless it is repealed. There is precedent.

In 1978, Congress required that beginning with fiscal 1981 the budget be balanced. In 1980, Congress said: Well, er, change that business about the balanced budget from a requirement to an aspiration.

Now, what were you saying about the misconceptions, superstitions and peculiar rituals of the Middle Ages?

Texans curb abuses of grants for arts

James Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Let us have a round of applause, if you please, for two rookie Republicans from Texas, Tom DeLay of Sugar Land and Richard Armey of Denton.

In their first terms in the House, they have managed to do what older members have failed to do: They may have curbed some of the abuses of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Note the doubtful verb. They "may have" curbed this money-squandering outfit. The abuses of the NEA's grant program are so pervasive and so outrageous that effective curbs probably are beyond any congressman's reach, but the two Texans at least have done something. Armey won an amendment to the NEA's authorization bill that will compel some sort of minimum accountability from grantees, and DeLay took a small but useful step toward halting the cronyism that has plagued this costly and unwarranted program.

During the course of committee hearings and floor debate, DeLay made a convincing case. Some of the worst abuses have occurred in the endowment's grants to "poets." During 1984, roughly 1,100 persons submitted what they regarded as poetry to the NEA. You will find it unbelievable, but 126 of them were awarded grants of $12,500 each. That is your money the NEA paid out. I make bold to say, on the basis of 60 years spent in reading and writing, that our nation houses no more than half a dozen poets whose stuff is worth printing. To judge from the examples that appear in our tonier magazines, that estimate is perhaps too high.

DeLay charges that some of our tax money subsidizes "poets" whose poems are obscene. He has documented his charge with specific examples. These examples are too lewd for publication in this family newspaper; they cannot even be printed in the Congressional Record. You will have to take my word for it. I am like Justice Stewart: I know obscenity when I see it, and this is it. And this stuff is not even artistic obscenity. Some of it is mere graffiti — dirty words scrawled on subway cars. One women got a grant for writing about the pleasure she found in oral sex; it read for all the world like the hard-core porn that appears every month in the raunchy columns of Gallery, Playboy and Penthouse.

Why in the world are our taxes frittered away on these frivolities? It is because many of the applicants are con artists, and many of the NEA's judges are quacks. The judges are scared out of their wits that if they call malarkey, malarkey, they will be accused of being anti-intellectual. They suffer from the same wacko syndrome that affects the world of art, in which any old contrivance of plywood, rusty iron and pingpong balls qualifies as sculpture.

Bad poetry is only one area in which the taxpayers are ripped off. In the field of "design arts," a woman in Cambridge, Mass., got a $20,000 grant in 1982 "to support production of a book to be entitled 'Reverberations,' a book about how cultural values are manifested in physical design and how design reverberates back to culture."

Her book is to serve "as a design advocacy tool." In her application she wrote that "design is change, focused by intent." "If life is a dance, design is the music." "What's hot is not only a commentary on our present culture; it projects into the unknown. It is the crystal ball whose message we try to decipher." I say that is spinach, and I say the hell with it.

Under Armey's amendment, post-award evaluations must be made, and the grantees must submit an accounting of how they spent the public's money. Under DeLay's amendment, no applicant for an NEA grant may sit on the panel judging his application. Heaven knows that is little enough to ask, but some of the old boys and girls on the NEA's panels know how backs are scratched.

The trouble at bottom is that there is no constitutional sanction whatever for these individual grants. Only by the most tortured construction of the general welfare clause may justification be found. To contend that a grant of $12,500 to a dirty little creep writing dirty little "poems" in some fashion promotes the "general" welfare is to engage in buncombe, balderdash and sham.

Perhaps a case can be made — a poor case, but at least a case — for NEA grants to symphony orchestras, established ballets and the like. These might doubtfully be construed as "general." At a time of $200 billion deficits, the other subsidies cannot possibly be defended. They ought to be wiped out.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Norman Lear

I may disagree with Barry Goldwater on many political issues — from some aspects of civil rights to Central America and the CIA.

But I am grateful to the noble Arizona Republican for the one political attitude I hold most dear: his unswerving and courageous dedication to protecting the American system of government as provided for by the Constitution.

When it comes to defending the Constitution, Barry Goldwater, with characteristic guts and gruffness, has no peer.

Recently, Goldwater demonstrated his abiding dedication to the Constitution during the Senate's debate over a bill introduced by Sen. Jesse Helms. Senator Helms, R-N.C., proposed that the federal courts, including the Supreme Court, be denied the authority to rule on cases involving the separation of church and state in the public schools. Senator Goldwater was obviously stunned by the thought.

"Did you really write this bill?" Goldwater asked Helms. Helms acknowledged that he did. "If I wrote it, I would be ashamed," replied Goldwater. He then went on to blast Helms' plan as tantamount to "outlawing the Supreme Court."

Goldwater was a prime mover in the Senate's overwhelming 62-36 defeat of Helms' proposal. The confrontation between Helms and Goldwater had a special drama both as a personal and political confrontation. It pitted the grand old man of American conservatism against his former follower. And it counterposed the leading Senatorial spokesman for the New Right against the leading representative of traditional conservatism. The issue dividing Helms and Goldwater was one that the two men and their respective movements have repeatedly debated during the 1980's: Whether fundamental constitutional principles should be sacrificed to achieve short-term political goals.

The bill which Goldwater so vehemently opposed was the latest of Helms; repeated attempts to "strip" the federal courts of the authority to decide cases on controversial issues, ranging from abortion to school desegregation to church/state questions. Helms and his followers New Rightists support these "court-stripping" proposals as a shortcut to abolishing school busing, outlawing abortions and allowing government-organized prayer in the public schools.

What thrills me about Senator Goldwater and other traditional conservatives is that they oppose the court-stripping bills, even though some of them agree with Helms on the various issues. To Goldwater and other traditional conservatives, it is more important to preserve the constitutional principle of an independent judiciary than to win a momentary political victory. As Goldwater declared while explaining his opposition to a 1982 court-stripping proposal, "We're more concerned about perpetuating our form of government than we are with busing, abortion, or prayer or anything else."

Almost a quarter century after he emerged as the leader of America's resurgent conservative movement, Barry Goldwater remains an eloquent advocate for a political philosophy that is conservative in the best sense of the word: a commitment to individual freedom of conscience and the constitutionally mandated separation of powers among the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of government. This traditional conservatism places Goldwater at odds with the extremists of the New Right, who would gladly sacrifice individual liberties, the separation of church and state, and the independence of the judiciary in their efforts to impose their narrow agenda. By standing up to the New Right, Goldwater gives new meaning to the title of his political manifesto, "The Conscience of a Conservative."

Thank you Barry Goldwater!

President delays Jordanian arms sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, bowing to overwhelming pressure in the Republican-controlled Senate, agreed Wednesday to delay his $1.9 billion Jordanian arms sale until March 1, unless Jordan and Israel begin peace talks, congressional sources said.

These sources said Reagan relayed his position to Senate GOP leaders, who had informed the administration they would move on their own to sidetrack the unpopular sale. The president's plan to sell sophisticated aircraft, air defense missiles and other arms to Jordan faces massive opposition from Republicans and Democrats alike in Congress.

Reagan's decision was welcomed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a leading opponent of the sale, who said the president had "bowed to the inevitable. This is not the time to send up an arms package."

Reagan, in New York to attend the opening of the United Nations session, declined comment to reporters.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said only, "We continue to work with Congress on the matter of the Jordan arms sale."

Only last week, Secretary of State George Shultz rebuffed Senate GOP leaders who asked the president to delay his formal notification of the sale.

The president formally notified Congress on Monday of his intention to sell the weapons to Jordan. More than 70 senators oppose the administration's proposal to make the sale unconditionally, and one senator said the president would have taken a "thrashing" if the issue had come to a vote.

Kennedy said he was prepared to force a vote during the day to bar the arms sale — a development that Republicans said prompted them to join in sponsoring the legislation blocking the sale until March 1.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters he expected the full Senate would approve the temporary ban on the sale on Thursday. The hurriedly drafted bill would bar the sale until March 1, unless "direct and meaningful peace negotiations" are underway between Israel and Jordan.

Even as Senate leaders acted, Vice President George Bush said, "we'd like to see it (the sale) done now or we wouldn't have sent it up there now. If we thought it should have been delayed we wouldn't have sent it now."

Despite Reagan's desire to go ahead with the sale immediately, GOP sources said he had relayed the word to Senate leaders that he would sign the measure restricting his hand.

U.S. issues visas to North Koreans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, in a rare lowering of travel barriers against North Koreans, on Wednesday granted permission to three of them to attend an academic conference in Washington.

Visas issued at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow will require the North Koreans to fly into Dulles Airport in suburban Virginia on Friday and leave on an outbound flight from the same airport on Monday, said Charles Redman, a State Department spokesman.

Redman said the decision to grant the visas did not reflect any change in policy toward North Korea.

House members vote to nullify court ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Education and Labor Committee approved on Wednesday a bill to nullify a Supreme Court decision requiring state and local governments to pay overtime to employees working more than 40 hours a week.

By unanimous vote, the panel approved the measure to amend the federal Fair Labor Standards Act, and sent it to the full House. A nearly identical bill is awaiting action in the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, where quick passage is expected.

The legislation was being rushed through Congress because the Labor Department has decided to implement the high court's ruling by Nov. 15.

The Supreme Court ruled last Feb. 19 that all provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act apply to government workers.

Initially, that decision was hailed by labor unions and opposed by thousands of local governments, which allow and sometimes encourage employees to take compensatory time off for overtime work.

But since then, governors, mayors, police chiefs, and budget officials have told congressional committees that without the flexibility of compensatory time, tax increases will be necessary to meet higher payroll costs.

Largely because of that grass roots uproar, Congress set to work this summer to overturn the high court's ruling. Unions sensed that a bill killing the decision was inevitable and agreed to help draft the compromise overtime pay measure.

'Unfair trade' campaign stepped up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration accelerated Wednesday its campaign against what it considers unfair trading practices, announcing it would subsidize selected U.S. exports even in advance of congressional action on a $300 million trade "war chest."

In an action U.S. officials said was directed primarily at France, the Export-Import Bank said it would offer "highly concessionary financing terms" to enable developing nations to purchase sophisticated U.S. equipment.

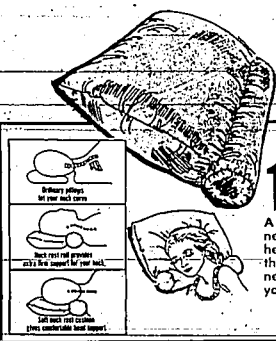

The bank, an administration agency, said the subsidies covered six transactions totaling $250 million in potential sales abroad.

It did not disclose specifically which products or which U.S. firms would benefit from the government aid — although officials said sales of U.S.-built transportation equipment, electric power generators and computers were involved.

L.M. Boyd What's what

Phone lying

It has been proven that many even most people who can't comfortably tell lies face to face are able to prevaricate freely when talking on the telephone. Why this difference?

Not counting Canada and Mexico, what nation is the United States' nearest neighbor? Not everybody you ask thinks of the Soviet Union, only three miles off, Alaska's Little Diomede Island.

What's the most cosmopolitan international city in the world? Some say British Columbia's Vancouver merits this distinction. What do you say?

FIRST CAR

Q. Who was president when the White House got its first car?

A. William Howard Taft. It's also a fact that he was the last president to keep a milk cow on the premises. Her name was Pauline.

Q. What's an "English flute"?

A. A wind instrument more commonly called a "recorder." Said to be the easiest instrument of all to learn to play.

Q. There's one place where the United States flag flies at full staff 24 hours a day, without ever being raised or lowered and without ever being saluted? Where?

A. The moon.

BOLIVIAN TRAINS

Those who know the railroads of Bolvia say you have your choice of four classes of train travel there: First class, on a wooden bench in a wooden coach. Second class, inside a boxcar. Third class, on open flat car. Fourth class, on top of a boxcar.

Yes, that mini-guitar called the "ukelele" was taken to Hawaii by Portuguese sailors about 100 years ago. But no, the word "ukelele" isn't Portuguese. It's from Hawaiian words meaning "small person jumping."

Cambodia's earliest boxers imitated fighting roosters — they strapped iron spurs to their hands and feet and slashed to the death.

Teenage drugs are 16 times more likely to attempt suicide than teenagers generally.

The scarecrows in Sri Lanka wear sarongs.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Early morning upsets and changes in plans are soon followed by a good chance for you to make an important person aware of your ambitions and to extend your assistance.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Study your goals in the morning, and you will know how to gain them by a more direct approach, so don't waste time foolishly.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Postpone that business affair until you have first realized some personal goal that is important to you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Steer clear of that overly talkative partner and get much accomplished in the world of activity so you become more prosperous.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't get so bogged down by your duties that you cannot see the opportunities around you for greater advancement.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Keep occupied with business matters of importance and forget pleasure for now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Maintain harmony at home even though tempted to argue, and then later, talk over with an associate how to improve joint interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Keep rooted to your work and gain benefits instead of running around hither and yon. In the morning, be careful in driving.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't commit yourself financially in the morning, and later you know how to push your finest talents.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your ideas may not be good in the morning, but you can profit from those of kin the rest of the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A private worry could easily keep you from accomplishing much in the outside world, if you permit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A pal could give advice that would get you into trouble, so forget it and work on practical affairs that need your attention.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Postpone settling that upsetting problem in the morning and do whatever pleases you most.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will be easily tempted to go after the things that are not good for him, or her, so be sure you get a good hold on your progeny early, but lovingly, and help lead in the right direction in life. One who would do well in artistic pursuits. Give good spiritual training.

Soviet bloc calls for mutual arms cuts

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other Warsaw Pact leaders said Wednesday they will withdraw and destroy any weapon in their arsenals if the West will do the same.

They also continued the Soviet bloc campaign against President Reagan's research program on a space-based defense system, declaring: "Any work on the development, testing and installation of strike space weapons, including anti-satellite devices, should be suspended."

The statement by the seven-nation communist military alliance culminated a two-day summit conference convened one month before Gorbachev's summit with Reagan in Geneva, Switzerland.

"Already existing nuclear arms should be frozen at the present quantitative levels, restricting to the maximum their modernization and simultaneously suspending the development, testing and deployment of new kinds and types of such weapons," it said.

"The stationing of medium-range missiles in Europe should be stopped. These steps could be effected even before an agreement is reached between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. on the entire set of questions related to nuclear and space weapons."

The statement also offered a freeze on the number of Soviet and American armed forces at the levels of Jan. 1, 1986.

It suggested a halt in developing of conventional weapons and a hold on military budgets starting in the next fiscal year.

Those and similar proposals, such as a non-proliferation agreement on chemical weapons, have figured in earlier statements by the Warsaw Pact. The United States has said the ideas were welcome but were either covered under existing agreements or not practical because no concrete proposals were offered for applying them.

"There is no type of weapon that they are unwilling to limit, reduce or withdraw from their arsenals and destroy for good under an agreement with the other states, while abiding by the principle of equality and equal security," the Warsaw Pact said in its statement.

Ivan Ganev, Bulgaria's deputy foreign minister, told reporters the communist alliance is "decisively in favor of curbing the arms race, in favor of the effecting of a positive change in international relations.

"The world has come closer to the line beyond which events may simply get out of control," he said.

East German family escapes to West

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A fence and jumped over the fence An East German couple and their two children escaped Wednesday across the border into West Germany, a spokesman for the border police said.

Spokesman Wolfgang Schlee said the family, undetected by East German border guards, drove up to a from their small truck.

The couple and their children, ages 7 and 8, reached Bavarian state territory in West Germany, Schlee said.

No other details of the escape were given. The couple was not identified in keeping with border police policy.

South African police accused of wild shooting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An opposition group in Parliament on Wednesday accused police of shooting indiscriminately in their attempt to quell bitter street rioting around Cape Town, where police reported four more deaths.

Officers manning a new fast-action gun that fires rubber bullets were seen behaving as if they were "trying out their new toy," said a member of the Progressive Federal Party's "Unrest Monitoring Committee."

A spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria, speaking on condition of anonymity, said only the contents of the report should be filed at the nearest police station" for investigation.

Gen. Constand Viljoen, chief of the South African Defense Force, said "malicious elements" were trying to discredit security forces by spreading rumors of brutality by the police and soldiers.

A riot patrol fired shotguns and tear gas at a mob of blacks stoning vehicles in the Guguletu black township near Cape Town, killing a black man, police headquarters said Wednesday.

Police said two bodies were recovered in the Crossroads black squatter area east of Cape Town. One black was killed by shotgun pellets, and the other was apparently killed by gasoline burns, they said.

A mixed-race man was shot dead in the nearby Hanover Park mixed-race suburb Wednesday night when a white man in a passing car fired on people who were throwing rocks, witnesses were quoted as saying.

Residents who saw the shooting were divided on whether the man who fired was a police officer or a vigilante, said a reporter.

He added that at mid-evening, rioters' barricades were aflame at some intersections and the roads through several mixed-race areas were littered with stones.

Police said several soldiers narrowly escaped injury when a black man threw a hand grenade at an armored personnel carrier in Crossroads. The blast caused only minor damage.

Police said mixed-race youths stoned and firebombed a white shopping center in Cape Town's Kraalfontein suburb Tuesday night, destroying two stores.

Salvadorans agree to deal

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The government will free 22 jailed rebels and permit evacuation of 96 wounded guerrillas in exchange for the kidnapped daughter of President Jose Napoleon Duarte, her friend and 33 abducted municipal officials, Duarte's chief adviser said Wednesday.

The deal ends more than six weeks of tension that nearly paralyzed the Salvadoran government while leaders negotiated with a little-known guerrilla group.

Abbas is implicated

ROME (AP) — Italian newspapers said Wednesday that a "repentant" Achille Lauro hijacker has told investigators that Mohammed Abbas, the PLO official sought by the United States, masterminded seizure of the cruise ship.

But the state-run radio and Corriere della Sera, Italy's largest daily newspaper, said investigating magistrates denied the reports.

The newspapers did not cite sources for the report that one of the four pirates had implicated Abbas, a close aide to Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

"If we had concrete and sufficient elements against him (Abbas) we would already have issued an arrest warrant," Gennaro Calabrese de Feo, Genoa's chief prosecutor, told Italian news agencies.

Francesco Meloni, a deputy prosecutor heading the investigation by magistrates in Genoa, where the cruise originated, refused to comment when contacted by The Associated Press.

The Rome newspaper La Repubblica said Abbas reportedly assured the four pirates he would have them freed by organizing terrorist attacks against any country detaining them.

Defendant: Slave was willing

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Color photos of a chained, naked woman are on the wall, and a waterbed trimmed with black vinyl looms in front of the witness stand in the trial of a man accused of imprisoning a woman for seven years as his sex slave.

Cameron Hooker, a 31-year-old mill worker from Red Bluff who is testifying this week in his defense, admits abducting the woman to fulfill his fantasies but claims his alleged victim was a willing participant in bondage rituals and grew to love him.

She has painted a picture of life in a coffin-like box or hanging nude from basement rafters.

The trial, which began Sept. 26, could go to the jury of seven women and five men as early as next week.

Hooker, who is accused of 12 counts of kidnap, rape and other sex charges, lived with his wife, Janice, and the alleged victim in Red Bluff, a ranching and farming community 160 miles northeast of San Francisco.

Janice Hooker and the woman have testified that after she was kidnapped at knifepoint while hitchhiking in 1977, the woman, then 20, was brought to the Hookers' home and either handcuffed and hung from the ceiling or kept in a small box for long periods of time, sometimes under the couple's waterbed.

The woman testified that she was forced to sign a sex slave contract giving herself to Hooker and was told the contract would be enforced by a fictitious group of sex slave traders known as "The Company."

Experts to try coaxing whale

RIO VISTA, Calif. (AP) — Authorities said Wednesday they will try to coax a confused, 45-ton humpback whale out of a narrow, fresh-water channel toward the Pacific Ocean with underwater sounds.

Experts of the National Marine Fisheries service said they will employ the sharp pinging sounds generated by mallets striking underwater pipes to persuade the 40-foot mammal to leave the river. The method, called "oikoime," has been used in Japan to herd porpoises.

Prospective jurors queried

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A retired Air Force major, and a school bus driver were among prospective jurors questioned Wednesday for a panel which will hear an alien smuggling case against 11 sanctuary movement defendants.

Although U.S. District Judge Earl H. Carroll hoped to speed the pace of the selection from Tuesday's opening day, the process seemed slower Wednesday, and his questions became more detailed for some.

Carroll planned to narrow the prospective jurors to 32 from the group of 80 called for the trial, and 15 were chosen by midday. The final panel of 12 jurors and two alternates will be selected from that.

The defendants, including a minister, two priests and a nun, are charged with conspiracy. Some also are charged with smuggling, transporting and harboring illegal aliens.

The defendants contend they were compelled by their religious beliefs to assist Salvadoran and Guatemalan refugees who are fleeing political oppression in their countries.

Robbins runs — no beans about it

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, says he and his campaign are well positioned to win a congressional campaign he expects to be dominated by farm issues.

After criss-crossing 17 southern Idaho counties to sell beans and talk with farmers, the freshman legislator has lost none of the confidence he started with in July.

He says his small-scale, low-key campaign will make him the best candidate for Congress next spring and will make him a well-informed legislator this fall. "Nobody is going to know this district like I do," the Dietrich dairyman, farmer, and accountant said in a Tuesday interview at a Twin Falls coffee shop.

Robbins' campaign stands in marked contrast to the more formal style of his Idaho Falls opponents, State Rep. J.F. Chadband and State Sen. Dane Watkins.

Robbins on his opponents...

'I don't really look at any of them as strong candidates.'

Wearing boots and jeans, flannel shirts, and a down vest, Robbins and his wife have driven around the state in a pickup truck loaded with sacks of beans he sells to finance his campaign. He's running a "high touch" campaign, without the benefit of computerized mass mailings.

He thinks it is working. "I am getting a very solid backing from the farm people," Robbins said.

As a farmer and accountant, Robbins said he offers the best of both worlds to voters from a region heavily dependent on the farm economy.

Recent hard times forced Robbins' farm and dairy operation into a Chapter 11 reorganization. Unlike bankruptcy, reorganization does not involve the sale of property or a court take-over of operations. Robbins said his farm is operating well under the reorganization plan and is paying off its debts to the Farmers Home Administration.

Robbins said his experience with the reorganization helps him to understand farmers and their problems. "If I go back there (to Washington, D.C.), you're talking about a lot more than a freshman," he said. "I have a strong background. I can be immediately useful."

State Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, and his wife, Jeri, pose with a sack of beans

Robbins said the federal budget deficit is the main cause for depressed farm prices and farm credit crunches. While federal budget writers "have got to hold the line somewhere," Robbins said, cutting all commodity price support programs immediately is not the answer. "I would find it difficult to pull the plug on people after looking them eyeball-to-eyeball for three months," he said.

... on J.F. Chadband:

... 'A furniture salesman'

... on Mel Richardson:

... 'A radio announcer'

Instead of offering new legislation, Robbins will offer a critical eye for new legislation, he said. He is not a "visionary type" but has the accounting and farming background to understand the impact of legislation and to spot faulty bills, he said.

Farmers are becoming more open to new solutions to their problems, Robbins said. "The farm people have never been willing to take restrictions, yet these people are sitting out there now and they're willing to take anything that will make the farm economy work better in the long term," he said.

With close to 19,000 miles of door-to-door campaigning behind him and about $2,000 in his campaign fund, Robbins is confident he will lead the group of fellow Republicans vying for a chance to take on incumbent Democratic Richard Stallings.

"I don't really look at any of them as strong candidates," in light of the emphasis on farm problems in the upcoming election, he said.

Robbins dismissed Chadband as a "furniture salesman"; Mel Richardson as a "radio announcer"; Watkins as a "guy who never had a job in his life"; and Dannis Adamson as "a man who pretends to be a farmer." Adamson is a Jerome attorney who Robbins doesn't know what he is talking about. He said while he does not milk many cows, he does all the financial work for his dairy and "I'm out there driving tractor and moving feed where need be."

... on Richard Stallings:

... He 'just isn't a farmer'

Watkins said, "That's a nice compliment." He said he has been involved in his family's business for about 15 years and his family has been in business for three generations. As chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, he said, he has learned to deal with agricultural issues. Watkins also said his family operates several farms.

Chadband is in the furniture retail and rental business, and Richardson is the "voice of Ricks College sports" on an eastern Idaho radio station.

Once he gets past the primary, Robbins said he will beat former Ricks College history professor Stallings who, he said, "just isn't a farmer."

... on Dane Watkins:

... 'A guy who never had a job in his life'.

... on Dannis Adamson:

... He 'is not a farmer and never has been'

Farmers or not, Robbins' opponents are better-financed than he is at this point and have more visible campaign organizations than the list of people Robbins said have promised to work for him. He said his low-profile campaign will shift into high gear after the legislative session. "People I have contacted will vote for us, because they have physically seen us," Robbins said.

Robbins said he has not yet pursued political action committee (PAC) funding because he doesn't want to make any deals. "There has to be some strings attached" to PAC money, he said. While he is not going to go looking for it, he hopes to become a strong enough candidate to attract PAC donations later on. "I'm not stupid enough to think I can win without it," he said.

He prefers to depend on individual donations, he said.

Predictions of jail lawsuit have ironically come true

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County officials had predicted it — a lawsuit might be filed against the county to close the 70-year-old jail because of its inadequacies.

The predictions, made during the county's attempts last winter to promote support among voters for a $6.2 million bond for a new Twin Falls County Jail, came true Tuesday when two inmates filed suit and asked 5th District Court to put a lock on the jail.

Attorney Greg Fuller, on behalf of Mike Goodson and Ted Matney, has asked the court to either close the jail or reduce the jail population and order the county to build a new one. Fuller charges the old one is unsafe, overcrowded and unconstitutional.

At a hearing next Tuesday the District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt will hear evidence on why he should not issue a temporary order to the county to do what the plaintiffs ask. A temporary order would be in effect until the court decides the main complaint.

The Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners, named in the suit, had no comment Wednesday and referred questions to Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter. Tuesday commissioners Judy Felton and Marvin Hempleman said they were "shocked" by the lawsuit.

Commission Chairman Ann Cover said Wednesday that the board received no telephone calls from

Proposed water regulations meant to protect the public

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Regulations being proposed by the state Department of Water Resources for the allocation of "trust water" will automatically declare certain uses "as not in the public interest," according to department Director Ken Dunn.

The draft rules will also govern the appropriation of non-appropriated water and will make some significant changes in state water laws.

Details of the proposed rules were outlined by Dunn and Norm Young, a DWR resources administrator, Tuesday at an informational meeting in Burley.

The draft rules set up a broad definition of trust water, which includes tributaries to the Snake River above the Swan Falls Dam and groundwater. That definition means that rules governing the allocation of trust water will apply to a broad array of water projects in the state, Dunn said.

As part of the Swan Falls settlement, the state gained control of 600 cubic feet per second of water measured at Murphy Gauge, below the Swan Falls dam, which it now holds in trust.

Two of the farthest-reaching points of the draft rules include the impacts of water use on hydropower production and the impacts of agricultural diversions close to the river.

According to the draft rules, any use which depletes trust water "causes a significant reduction" in the water available for hydropower production. In addition, when evaluating the economic impacts of lost hydropower production, the department will consider the effect of lost water on not only the hydropower facilities above the Swan Falls Dam, but to the Hells Canyon Dam and other downstream facilities.

The department, Young said, interpreted the state Legislature's in-

Last day to register for vote is Friday

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Friday is the last day to register to vote in the Nov. 5 Twin Falls City election.

It will be the first election to test the new combined registration plan of the city and Twin Falls County. Under the consolidation, people can register at either the County Courthouse or City Hall. Only City Hall, however, will be open until 8 p.m. Friday for late registrations, said Jewel Chandler, a deputy city clerk.

Previously, city voters were given until Nov. 1 to register, said Rick Thompson, city clerk and finance director. Because the city and county combined registrations, state law mandates an Oct. 25 deadline, he added.

Once registered, people will be able to vote in the upcoming city election, as well as in county and general elections, Thompson said.

On the Nov. 5 ballot will be candidates for three city council positions and a bond levy to partially finance a new swimming pool.

Because the city and county consolidated precincts, some people will be voting in different precincts than in previous years. A total of 12 new precincts — nine of which encompass the city of Twin Falls — were created from 26 county precincts and 10 city precincts.

The city mailed out last week a little more than 14,700 cards to city residents, notifying them they are registered to vote, their precinct number and where they will vote, Chandler said.

There have been some snags in the new consolidation system. Some people have received two cards, with two different precinct numbers. Chandler said the duplication probably was the result of the same person using different signatures with the city and county registrations. For instance, the same person might have registered under the name John L. Smith with the city and John Smith with the county. The clerks didn't have time to sort out the names by addresses. As a result, the clerks couldn't tell if there were two Smiths or just one when the county and city registration lists were combined.

Anyone receiving two cards or recently changing their address, should notify the city, Chandler added.

Chandler also said a number of the

Chadband defends Stallings/Fonda letter during speech

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Second District Congressional candidate J.F. Chadband says his fund-raising letter linking U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, to Jane Fonda gave him all the public exposure he wanted and exposed Stallings as a liberal.

Speaking to a gathering of about 17 supporters Tuesday at the China Garden Restaurant in Twin Falls, State Rep. Chadband, R-Idaho Falls, said that despite criticism he has sustained over the letter, he is not contrite. "I'm not apologizing. If the press didn't like the way we did this, maybe we should send out the whole picture," Chadband said.

In the full photograph of congressmen and actresses from which the picture of Stallings and Fonda was taken, the average congressman's score on one conservative voting index was 9 percent, compared to a House of Representatives average of 41 percent, Chadband said. "You can see the type of people he's hanging out with."

The picture was part of Chadband's opening salvo in his election campaign, a fund-raising letter that called the Rexburg Democrat the favorite congressman of actress and liberal activist Jane Fonda. The photograph was lifted from the front cover of a Capitol Hill newspaper article about a hearing on the farm crisis. Stallings says he has never spoken to Fonda.

"I never would have posed with her," Chadband said. "Richard Stallings liked the idea and (House Speaker) "Tip" O'Neill, (D-Massachusetts) set it up to hype the farmers and the Democrats."

Evans bolsters Sawtooth's recreational image

The Associated Press
and the Times-News

BOISE — The Sawtooth National Forest is primarily a recreation area, where fish, wildlife and scenic values generally outweigh timber production, Gov. John Evans says.

Evans released his comments on the Forest Service's draft management plan for the central Idaho forest Wednesday, stating his support for the federal agency's management plan with "some modifications." In a letter to Forest Supervisor Ron Stoleson, the governor urges expanding wilderness in the Boulder White-Clouds and establishing motorized and non motorized areas within the Smoky Mountain areas.

Evans also recommended approving nine other semi-primitive area proposals, reassessment of proposed timber sales and involving the National Park Service in a cooperative management plan for the City of Rocks. That scenic area is south of Almo, near the Utah-Idaho border.

Stoleson told the Times-News he had no comment on Evans' letter, but he would address the governor's concerns, along with other remarks the agency has been receiving from goverment agencies and the general public, after the comment period closes on Nov. 5.

The governor said he supported Forest Service proposals for timber sales in north Idaho forests. But the Sawtooth, he said, is "primarily a recreation area, and outdoor activities should outweigh the need for timber production.

Evans asked the Sawtooth National Forest to add 44,000 acres to its proposed White Clouds Wilderness. He also indicated support for including at least 40,000 acres on the Challis National Forest side of the White Cloud-Boulder mountains for a combined area of more than 240,000 acres.

"There is widespread public support for preservation of the magnificent White Cloud and Boulder Mountains," the governor said.

Pact to protect rocks signed

BURLEY (AP) — Cassia County and four state and federal agencies have signed an agreement to protect and preserve the City of Rocks historic site — a natural wonder that first awed pioneers 130 years ago.

The new agreement marks the first time governmental units have joined together to preserve the area, located south of Almo and not far from the Idaho-Utah border.

Westward-bound pioneers left evidence of their passage — ranging from axle-grease signatures to rutted tracks left behind by "prairie schooners." It was designated a National Historic Site several years ago, but the federal designation carries no protection.

"We went in with the intent of trying to get all the agencies to work together and do some joint management planning," said Bob Meinen, state parks and recreation director.

Parks and Recreation has title to some land in the heart of the City of Rocks, although the area never has been managed or designated as a state park. The U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management also control portions of the site.

Also signing the agreement was the state Fish and Game Department.

Much of the site is in private hands, which complicates management. Some landowners fear that their use of the property could be restricted if new state and federal regulations are adopted.

At a Jerome meeting last week most of the time was spent trying to agree on boundaries of the area involved.

"We needed to identify it from historical and geological perspectives so all the agencies would be talking about the same area," said BLM Burley District Manager John Davis.

Meinen said he hopes to come up with a long-range management plan that would allow most of the current usage but stop deterioration of some of the site's most attractive features.

The axle-grease signatures are eroding with time, he said, and are being covered by modern graffiti.

Rock climbers drawn by the unique granite cliffs at the site, should have guidelines that prevent damage to the rocks, Meinen said.

County Commission Chairman Weldon Beck said he supports the effort to protect the City of Rocks, but will insist that the rights of private landowners be considered.

Shoshone students must have average of C for activities

By JaNENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Junior high students in Shoshone must meet new academic eligibility requirements for extracurricular activities.

The Shoshone School Board recently voted to apply the same policy for junior high students that it uses for students at Shoshone High School.

Under this policy, a student must maintain a C grade average, unless they are identified by a counselor as special education students or "lower performing" students who are working to their ability.

The previous junior high policy, set earlier this year, called for junior high students to be evaluated every three weeks with teachers indicating whether or not the student was working at capacity.

Junior high teacher Delmar Hardy told the board the "effort policy" wasn't working because teachers viewed effort in differing ways.

Under the policy, a student with a C average was still determined ineligible because some teachers felt the student could do better work.

"An eligibility policy has no merit in getting these kids to study," Hardy said. He asked the board to eliminate the junior high eligibility policy altogether.

"They can't fail at everything and still be a success," he said, adding, "they need positive input, not a kick in the teeth."

Superintendent Tim Adsit agreed that the effort-based policy was not working in the way it was intended and recommended it be changed.

The board decided a policy was needed and opted to go with the C grade, with provisions for students who are not capable of earning the average grade for the remainder of this school year.

Adsit was asked to poll the parents of students in grades six to eight on the eligibility issue and then set up a meeting with the parents so the matter can be discussed.

In other business:

• Board chairman Donna Hibbard told the board she was concerned about student behavior during this year's homecoming activities.

An egg throwing incident during the homecoming parade caused concern and property damage, she said, and the private areas used for building class floats were left in disarray.

Board member Jim Rowlan said he was concerned about students staying at the float sites until early morning and, in some cases, all night. He said there also had been instances of beer consumption at the site as well.

Hibbard suggested that homecoming activities be limited to three days instead of an entire week with a curfew for float building activities and more adult supervision.

• Hibbard also suggested that the freshman "slave sale" as part of freshman initiation be eliminated, calling it a "humiliating experience" for many students.

She also suggested the homecoming game be scheduled early enough in the day that the dance can be ended at midnight.

Adsit was directed to discuss the matter with high school student body officers and, student council to work out appropriate changes. The board agreed to prepare a letter outlining areas of concern for student leaders.

residents about the suit, with the exception of news reporters.

Deputy Public Defender Tim Wilson, however, commented that "it was about time" something was done about the jail.

Twin Falls Attorney Jon Shindurling, who headed the campaign to promote the jail bond election, said Wednesday that he wasn't surprised by the filing of the lawsuit.

Though he couldn't comment specifically on the case, he said: "I'm surprised one's taken so long. All through the campaign I said this was inevitable. I hope what it does do is make the community more aware that the situation is more critical than it's given credit to be, that something must be done. This is not something that will go away."

The bond issue was decisively defeated in a March 19 election.

While the lawsuit may have taken some by surprise, the possibility of such a suit against the county is nothing new.

The commissioners, sheriff and volunteer jail committee even stated it in a promotional pamphlet published before the election. The material warned that if the bond didn't pass, "It is very likely the current jail will, by court order, be reduced to a 48-hour holding facility. It's estimated that transportation costs will nearly equal the yearly costs required to pay off a bond issue."

The pamphlet projected the cost to transport inmates at $1.3 million, should the bond be defeated and the jail reduced to a short-term facility. The jail is designated as a medium-term facility.

Other counties now charge Twin Falls County between $20-$25 a day, per inmate, to house its prisoners. Almost every day this month, there have been from four to 10 county inmates per day in other jails.

When asked if there were anything more that could be done to ease the problems at the jail, Sheriff Jim Munn said Tuesday that the staff was doing everything possible to keep conditions safe.

Wilson said he had great respect for Munn and his staff, because they were doing the best job they could do with the jail; but the facility is "not worth keeping open," he said.

Wednesday there were 47 inmates in the main jail; five county prisoners being held in the Twin Falls City Jail and seven inmates being housed in other jails in the Magic Valley.

The jail population could increase today as there were 25 persons scheduled to be sentenced in 5th District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls. While not all will go to jail, on the average of five to 10 people usually are sent to jail per week.

structions to consider utility impacts to mean impacts throughout the state. Dunn added that since a number of small projects can have a substantial cumulative effect on hydropower production, the department thought it appropriate to consider all projects depleting water as having a "significant impact."

The draft rules also label any direct diversions for agriculture within four miles of the Snake River as "not in the public interest."

The reason for this, Young said, is that these close diversions would have "immediate impacts" on the river and would reduce the acreage that could be brought into production in fields farther from the river where time to seep back into the ground and be reused in other fields or applications, Young said.

The public interest criteria to be used in evaluation of the allocation of trust water are defined in the draft rules. Concerns addressed in the public interest criteria include: direct and indirect economic benefits, impact on electric utility rates, promotion of the family farm tradition, promotion of full economic and multiple use of water, and whether or not the proposal conforms to the state's staged development policy for increasing irrigated agricultural land.

As part of this public interest criteria, the agency suggests limiting a family farm to 960 acres of Class I equivalency, as defined by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. Equivalency is a flexible standard used by the federal agency to equate agricultural lands of differing quality to the productivity of prime farmland.

According to the proposed rules, no single public interest criteria will be given greater weight than any other.

Two other new points raised by the draft rules include giving the director of the DWR the power to impose a moratorium on applications for water permits as well as undeveloped permits, in order to protect water resources; and placing the burden of proof on the protester when water permits are contested.

The DWR plans to officially promulgate rules by the end of November or early December. Public hearings will be held in early January, Dunn said, and the rules should be adopted by mid-February.

The department hopes to get the rules to the Legislature for final approval at least 20 days before the end of its session, Dunn said. That way, the Legislature will be required to act on the rules before it adjourns, he said.

The department will be accepting written comments on its draft rules until Nov. 8. The address is: director, IDWR, Statehouse Mail, Boise 83720.

Copies of the draft rules may be obtained by calling the DWR's toll-free Energy Information Hotline at 800-334-7283.

cards had been returned, marked non-deliverable, probably because people have moved.

The questions, complaints, returned cards and duplications in the system, however, are small compared to the number of cards issued, Thompson said. In fact, he was surprised at how few problems have arisen.

It will take time to obtain the most accurate master list of city and county voters, he added. But part of the reason for the card mailing was to work out bugs before the election.

The number of people registered in the city, at least from the mailings, is high, considering the population of Twin Falls, Thompson said.

While there may be confusion now, city and county officials say the consolidation will make registration and voting procedures more efficient and less confusing later.

Chadband

said he and his campaign steering committee decided the picture and letter was the best way to "get the hype on Richard Stallings and where he's coming from."

"We do feel we've gotten his record exposed and we do feel people know who Chad is," he said.

Voters should replace Stallings with a Republican to give Idaho a full Republican delegation to Congress, said Chadband, charging that Stallings cancels out the votes of Republican Congressman Larry Craig from the northern congressional district.

Chadband said he will push for tuition tax credits for parents with children in private schools or similar legislation to increase competition between private and public schools. "I call it not public education, but government education," he told the group.

One injured in truck spills

GOODING — Two transport trucks were involved in accidents in a rain storm Tuesday night on Interstate Highway 84 in Gooding County.

Idaho State Police officer Doug McFall said both of them occurred about 9 p.m. within a few minutes of one another and about five miles apart. Both were on a rutted section of the Interstate which was made slick by the rain storm.

He said the accident he investigated resulted in about $20,000 damage and because of numerous accidents on that stretch of highway and the slick conditions, no citation was issued.

A truck hauling cable and driven by David W. Allen, 31, of Murray, Utah, went out of control while passing another vehicle and jackknifed, going off the roadway and coming to rest against a fence. McFall said the truck, owned by Jack Weber Trucking Co., of Kearns, Utah, was in the second of the two accidents. Allen had just passed the first accident and was en route to Bliss to report it. The second accident occurred between Bliss and Tuttle. The first accident was further east, between Wendell and Tuttle.

McFall said about 100 gallons of diesel fuel was spilled on the highway and the Wendell Fire Department responded to wash it away. Even after numerous washings, the highway remained extremely slick and a state Division of Highways sand truck was called to assist.

The first accident, involving one injury and extensive damage to the truck, was investigated by the Gooding County Sheriff's Department. There was no report available as of Wednesday night.

Challis input deadline is approaching

TWIN FALLS — Deadlines are approaching for public comment on the draft management plans for the Sawtooth and Challis National Forests.

The deadline for comments on the Challis plan is Oct. 25. The deadline for comments on the Sawtooth plan is Nov. 5.

The Sawtooth plan includes management plans for the Boulder-White Clouds, the Smoky Mountains, Pioneer Mountains, the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, as well as the forest's southern units in the South Hills, the Cache Peak area, the Raft River area, and the Sublett and Black Pine divisions of the forest.

While the Challis National Forest is to the north of the Sawtooth National Forest, it includes lands which are part of the White Clouds and the Pioneer Mountains partially addressed in the Sawtooth plan. In addition, the Challis plan also covers lands containing the Lehmi Mountains and the Lost River Range.

The address for comments on the Sawtooth plan is Roland Stoleson, supervisor, Sawtooth National Forest, 1525 Addison Ave. E., Twin Falls 83301.

For the Challis forest the address is Jack Criswold, Challis National Forest, Box 404, Challis 83226.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Mountain States Tumor Institute, or the Hospice Home Nursing Service in Twin Falls.

Neal Nevada Silver

JEROME — Neal "Nevada" Silver, 69, of Jerome, died Tuesday afternoon at his home after a sudden illness.

Born March 8, 1916, in Picabo, he moved to Marshall, N.C., with his parents in 1917. He attended schools in Marshall, then returned to Idaho in 1929, attending schools at Falls City and Hailey. He served with the CCC Corps, then was a ditchrider for the Big Wood Canal Co. in Hailey in 1935-36.

A long-time resident of Twin Falls, he moved to Jerome in 1970. He married Grace Chess June 11, 1935, in Elko, and they were later divorced.

Mr. Silver was a long-time contract milk hauler, working for Sego, Challenge and the Pet Milk Co. He was honored for 28 years of service with the Pet Milk Co. He also worked seven years for Idaho Gem Dairy. Just prior to his retirement, he had been a truck driver for the Jerome Gas and Oil Co.

He helped organize the Idaho Outdoor Association, later serving as president and director. He was a licensed guide and outfitter, and had operated a guide and outfitting company since 1951.

He owned and bred Morgan horses as a sideline business, and had served as president and director of the Idaho Morgan Horse Association.

He was a member of the Big Foot Trail Riding Club and the National Rifle Association.

Surviving are: a daughter, Flame Silver Klundt of Twin Falls; three sons, Flash Silver of Granger, Utah, Ace Silver of Salt Lake City and Barry Silver of Phoenix; five brothers, J.G. Silver, George Silver Jr. and Bart Silver, all of Jerome, Ray Silver of Shoshone and Leonard Silver of Boise; a sister, Sylvia Hite of Jerome; six grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by a son and a sister.

The funeral will be held Friday at 11 a.m. in the Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel, with the Rev. Loren Blades and John Buttars officiating. Burial will be in Jerome Cemetery.

Friends may call at the chapel in Jerome from 1 to 8 p.m. today and from 9 to 10 a.m. Friday.

Sun Valley Company makes concessions at option tax meeting

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — In a meeting highlighted by a spirit of reconciliation with its most determined tax critic, the city of Sun Valley began work Tuesday on broadening the base of its local option tax to lower the rate charged vacationing guests.

The city and Sun Valley Co., which sued the city over the tax and nearly won, said they wanted "to bury the hatchet" and get on with creating a tax that is more equitable for all Sun Valley businesses.

Both sides bent a little in an effort to find a workable solution to the tax disagreement.

The company is now ready to participate in the process and get a tax that's less discriminatory than what we have now," said Wally Huffman, general manager for the Sun Valley Co.

Last week, the company withdrew its petition for the Idaho Supreme Court to reconsider its August decision upholding the tax after a District Court judge ruled it was unconstitutional.

The petition was the last legal opportunity for the company to challenge the tax, which now places a 5 percent charge on rented rooms and lounge drinks.

In return, the city moved close to exempting the company's ski lift tickets from a lower general sales tax.

The city also said it had learned something about austerity after it was ordered to stop spending the tax after Feb. 28, 1985, a result of the company's suit.

"We have learned areas where we can live with less than we did a year ago," Mayor Ruth Lieder told a group of business managers attending the council meeting.

Although the council delayed a final decision on the new structure, it seems prepared to adopt a broad-based sales tax of about 2 percent, with lift tickets the only exemption other than those items now exempt from the state sales tax.

Still being debated is the duration of the tax the city will place on a Dec. 3 ballot in a special election for city voters, who must approve the changes with a 60 percent vote.

A final draft of the new tax structure is expected to be hammered out by the council at noon Friday in the City Hall.

City Administrator Jack Brown said the city could raise about $482,000 with a 2 percent tax on the $24 million in retail sales for 1984 the city's businesses recently reported to an outside accounting firm.

With ski lift tickets exempted, he said, the city would raise about $412,000 on $20.5 million in sales. Huffman said the company grosses about $3.5 million from its sale of lift tickets in the city of Sun Valley.

Historically, the tax has raised from $475,000 to $537,000 since it was initiated in 1978, with last year's receipts being the larger amount.

The council, however, said it could live with less, from between $425,000 and $450,000, and still provide its large influxes of tourists with adequate services, mostly paid for with proceeds from the tax.

With ski lift tickets exempt, however, the city cannot generate the minimum $425,000 without raising the tax above 2 percent, but the council seemed prepared to absorb the loss.

Councilmen John Jones and Tom Praggastis agreed with Huffman's position that a tax on the tickets would actually be a tax on the company and not its customers.

Huffman said the pricing of the tickets, now set at $27, is "sensitive" in the competitive ski industry, and that it would be difficult for the company to add a 54-cent tax to the price of tickets. As a result, the company would end up paying the tax.

If the city taxes the tickets, he said, the company may have to move the sales of all of its tickets outside the cities of Sun Valley and Ketchum at the bottom of its ski lifts to Bald Mountain.

Rather than force the company to absorb the loss or force its ticket sales out of the city, Praggastis said, he prefers to exempt the tickets.

Jones, however, questioned if the city could get by with less than $425,000. In response, Councilman Steve Luber said it could. It would, however, leave the city without any contingency funds in case of an emergency, Luber said.

Luber proposed a tax of 2.25 percent, exempting lift tickets, with .25 percent dedicated to economic development.

Others, including Lieder, questioned taking the tax over 2 percent, and City Attorney Mark Russell advised the council against dedicating any funds to "unnamed and unknown" projects. Otherwise, he said, the funds would be unavailable if needed in an emergency.

Praggastis said his main concern with the tax is to make it fair to all businesses in the city and to keep them competitive with businesses in Ketchum, which has a 1 percent general sales tax with a 2 percent tax on rentals and barroom drinks.

Luber said he would like to pass the tax for another four years so the city wouldn't have to keep returning to the voters to approve the tax. He said he also wants the tax vote tied to the city's general election as a convenience to voters.

Lieder, however, said she prefers a two-year duration as a test period to see how the new structure works out.

Burley mayoral candidates respond to police queries

By LINDA LARSON
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — About 70 local residents turned out Wednesday to hear three mayoral candidates respond to questions from Burley police officers unhappy about wages, benefits and the city's financial priorities.

Prior to the meeting with incumbent Mayor Chuck Shadduck, Councilman Ken Fronk, chairman of the police committee, and Joe Peters, a Burley mayor during the 1960s, members of the police officers' union held a news conference in front of City Hall.

Union representatives criticized city officials for police salaries, which they say are too low.

"Burley police are the lowest-paid in the state," charged Warren Lundquist, of the Idaho Service Employees Union office in Boise.

He criticized the city for recently spending $14,000 on a phone system and $21,000 on a computer as well as voting for pay raises for the council members and mayor.

"I don't think their priorities are in the right place," said Lundquist. "They should have to feel the poverty pinch, too."

Eighteen of the 27 police department employees are members of the union which was organized last spring.

Jim Dunavan, secretary of the union's local chapter, said that patrolmen had sent a letter to Shadduck last June detailing a list of greivances about wages, insurance and other benefits. But, he said, a reply to that letter was not sent until Oct. 8, and the letter was from the City Attorney Bill Parsons.

"The letter basically said nothing," said Dunavan. "It was an 'I'll-take-it-under-advisement' letter."

Shadduck said later at the public forum that he had sent a letter in the same envelope with Parsons' letter, however he did not elaborate on its contents.

Fronk said that he had not been in on all the meetings between the police and the mayor, but he had attended one closed session meeting that he had asked be held.

Fronk said he was not happy with the answers given in Parson's letter. "I think we need to answer them more directly," he said.

The main topic at the public meeting centered on money spent by the council.

When asked about police salaries, Fronk said that he had suggested a year ago that salaries of police officers be raised by allowing a cut in the staff through attrition and then giving the money saved to the remaining patrolmen in the form of pay raises.

"That idea was shot down," said

Donation to boost marketing budget in Ketchum area

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce received a boost Monday when the Ketchum City Council donated $30,000 to its 1985-86 marketing program.

The money will pay for all or part of the cost for advertisements in three magazines and is a part of a $491,000 marketing campaign being undertaken by the chamber this year in conjunction with local businesses.

The council's action confirms its earlier commitment to give the money to the chamber from its local option tax receipts. The money will be turned over to the chamber as soon as a formal contract is written.

"This $30,000 will go a long way in rounding out the chamber's program," John Wells, a member of the chamber's Marketing Committee, told the council.

The money will pay for three ads:

• $14,673 for an ad in the January 1986 edition of Ski magazine. The issue is the magazine's 50th Anniversary Commemorative Edition that will have a 90-day shelf life, Wells said.

Ski magazine and Sun Valley Co. are celebrating their 50th anniversaries, as well as the golden anniversary of alpine skiing in the United States, this winter.

• $8,115 for an ad in the Western edition of Travel & Leisure magazine and will be targeted to reach more than the skier market, Wells said. The magazine is circulated to 250,000 American Express credit card holders. A part of the city's donation, $1,200, will pay for the production of the ad.

• $6,012 to help pay for an ad in the February 1986 edition of "United Mainliner," the in-flight magazine for United Airlines.

The chamber's marketing program is using funds from a number of sources, including a $93,333 grant from the Idaho Travel Council, $55,851 in cooperative advertising money from American Express, $88,014 in cooperative advertising money from Horizon Airlines and $175,246 from the resort's businesses.

The local private sector's contribution comes from ads bought in 16-page advertising inserts in Ski and Skiing magazines.

The marketing program also includes ads in regional magazines in California, other in-flight magazines, billboard advertising, radio spots and to work with travel writers writing about the area.

Policy will regulate eligibility for CSI classwork

By KRISTIN TUCKER
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN — The Hansen School Board is making it easier for seniors at Hansen High School to be college students.

At Monday's board meeting, Superintendent Richard Smith presented a policy for high school seniors wishing to take classes at the College of Southern Idaho during the regular school day.

The proposed policy, to be formally presented next month, requires that these students have at least a 3.0 grade point average, and be in the process of completing all graduation requirements.

The CSI-HHS students must also have the permission of the school administration and their parents and must provide their own transportation. Class schedules also must include enough time for travel without interfering with high school classes.

The board last month granted permission to two HHS seniors to attend CSI classes during the school day. If the board passes the proposed policy next month, students will no longer need to get individual permission from the board.

In other business:

• The board approved a fund-raising request by Future Homemakers of America. With its eye on the national FHA competition next spring, Hansen FHA has plans for a community dinner, talent show, cake raffle and turkey raffle during the coming months. Proceeds from the fund-raisers will be used to send FHA members to the national competition.

Officials designate day to observe the problem of local child abuse

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — City officials and the director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare proclaimed Wednesday "Child Protection Awareness Day" to highlight the problem of child abuse and neglect in local communities.

IDHW Director Rose Bowman watched while the mayors of Burley, Paul and Heyburn signed the proclamation. The mayors of Oakley and Rupert were unable to attend the ceremony, but indicated they also would sign the document.

"This is the only place in the state where the communities have gotten together for the prevention of child abuse that I know of," Bowman said.

Over 700 cases of child abuses were reported in the Mini-Cassia area in 1984. Local IDHW employees say they would like to see that number lowered this year but are afraid that there may be an increase of cases in 1985.

IDHW social worker Al Null, who was the moderator at Wednesday's ceremony, underscored the importance of the awareness program, telling the group that a local school principal had called IDWH officials earlier that day to report the possible abuse of one of his students, who reportedly had all his eyelashes burned off with a cigarette by his mother.

Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee, thanked Bowman for attending Wednesday's ceremony.

"I hope that this creates awareness in the community of the serious problem of child abuse."

The joy of little boys is that they finally grow up

Diana Hooley
Country neighbors

I don't know who said little boys are made of puppy dog tails, but they were wrong. Rhinoceros hides, maybe, but not puppy dog tails. I know they're made of rhinoceros hides because their ability to withstand a swat on the behind is second to none.

And if their rear ends are thick and tough their heads are made of rubber. I know this because I have seen my two sons' heads bounce off bedposts, walls and each other, and they still maintain uncrossed eyes and coherent speech.

I read once that little boys are rowdy and rambunctious because of hormones. As a woman, I can certainly sympathize with that. I've dealt with mutinied hormones for years.

But my question is, are hormones responsible for the grueling workout little boys put their vocal chords through mimicking a truck shifting gears up a hill? Or are hormones responsible for my 4-year-old son's greatest passion in all this world, his friend, his fantasy, his partner — He-Man?

Check out the drawing of the He-Man cartoon figure with your own sons, Mom. There's no reason to fool yourself any longer. You may make the jelly bread, you may build the play dough snowman, you may wipe the runny nose and give the hugs, but you've been replaced.

I've come to terms with this sad fact. Actually, the boys' fascination with He-Man has turned into a bit of an asset. The half hour a day they spend with this revered figure is a half hour a day I can devote to other worthy pursuits, like putting our bed back together.

And every mother knows why our bed is fallen apart. The little boys have used it as a trampoline all day! Can we blame them? How much energy can they get rid of playing with boring old blocks? No good mother would doom a kid to playing on the floor quietly with toy farm animals all day. Just ask any kid.

The good mother fights with the good housewife in me on this bed-trampoline stuff. One minute I'm delighted the boys are laughing and doing something physically enjoyable on a cold fall day. The next minute I'm horrified to find my mattress propped against the dresser and the bedsheets strung over the bedside lamp. I don't like riding an emotional roller coaster. I may have to put a lock and key on our bedroom door.

But how will I protect the furniture in the rest of the house? Little boys can beat out rust, dust and moisture to ruin a perfectly good piece of furniture. I've already given up a favorite picture, grandma's lamp, and a couch cushion to the cause. All victims of either a thrown ball, an ill-fated jump, or a chewed package of Hubba-Bubba bubble gum.

The good news is, little boys grow up. Then all we'll have to worry about is whether they're skipping school, out drinking or wrecking the family car.

A lot of older mothers have warned me about this stage. They tell me I should be happy I still have my sons under foot where I can keep an eye on them. I suppose they're right. At this point, I can definitely say I'd rather be tripping over my sons than my sons' girlfriends.

Driver killed in head-on collision

MOUNTAIN HOME — One of two drivers killed in a head-on traffic accident on I-84, just east of Mountain Home, Tuesday night was identified Wednesday, but efforts continued to locate possible survivors of the second.

Elmore County Sheriff Larry Olson said the shattering collision killed both drivers instantly and left three other persons, including a 15-day-old infant, seriously injured.

He said a small vehicle, driven by a 66-year-old Oregon man, was traveling west in the eastbound outside lane about 8:30 p.m.

An eastbound sedan, driven by Martin C. Zamora, no age given, pulled out to pass a van and collided head-on with the approaching auto.

The three unidentified injured persons, including a woman and a 15-year-old girl, were passengers in the Zamora vehicle. All were residents of the Hammett farm labor camp, Olson said.

The driver of the van, Richard Lewis of Washington state, told Olson he started to pass a vehicle ahead of him, saw the oncoming lights and pulled back into the inside lane. Zamora then pulled out to go around him and the crash occurred.

The Zamora vehicle, a 1977 sedan, came to rest in the right eastbound lane, while the small auto came to rest in the median strip. Officers worked several hours to remove the body of the victim from the wreckage. The Lewis van came to a stop against the Zamora vehicle. There were no injuries to Lewis or his family and only minor damage to the van.

The infant in the Zamora vehicle suffered a skull fracture and was flown to Boise late Tuesday night for treatment, as was the young girl. Elmore Memorial Hospital officials said the mother was in stable condition Wednesday afternoon.

Block declares Butte disaster

WASHINGTON — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block has declared Butte County a natural disaster area, bringing emergency loans to farmers there and in six bordering counties, including Blaine County.

Block authorized the federal aid because of extensive crop damage caused by rain, hail and windstorms that swept through the area at the end of July, an assistant to U.S. Sen. Jim McClure said in announcing the action.

To be eligible for the lower rates, farmers must have suffered losses based on a five-year average crop production.

Friday is Wendell deadline

WENDELL — Friday will be the last day Wendell voters can register for the Nov. 5 municipal election. City Hall will be open until 8 p.m. on Friday for late voter registration.

The early Oct. 25 closure date is because Wendell is on a joint city and county registration system that takes longer to process than in other areas, said City Clerk June Holm.

Jaycees slate Friday meeting

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Jaycees will hold a meeting Friday evening to organize a Twin Falls chapter.

The Jaycees, a national community service organization, are open to men and women between the ages of 18 and 36. The Jaycees currently have 488 members in Idaho and 15 chapters, said President Gary Tilton recently.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn.

In addition to the community-wide fund-raisers, the group plans community service projects and school events.

• Hansen Elementary School received the board's approval to sell Christmas candles as the school's annual fund-raiser.

Smith reported that teachers at the elementary school submitted suggestions for the fund raising and agreed to purchase visual aids and equipment for the school math and science depoartments.

Smith said the elementary students will soon be taking orders for the Christmas candles.

• HHS office practices classes are now using five new typewriters, purchased with vocational appropriations funds. The board agreed to try to sell the school's older model manual typewriters.

• A request from the Idaho Department of Education to establish a district policy on AIDS was referred to the state code.

Idaho Code 33-205 states, "The board of trustees may deny attendance at any of its schools by expulsion to any pupil . . . whose presence in a public school is detrimental to the health and safety of other schools."

Another section of the code gives the board power to exclude from school pupils who have or are suspected of having contagious or infection diseases.

"How can we establish a policy when medical people can't even agree?" asked Trustee Gene Walker.

Said Smith, "The state ought to develop a policy. Then you would have only one policy. This way you could have 115 different policies."

Darrington said. "This has become something that we are all interested in."

"Sexual and physical abuses are extremely intolerable," Darrington added.

Null said the local campaign to increase community awareness of child abuse has two major purposes.

"One is, how can we better address the community to the issues of child protection?" Null said. "The other purpose is to find out how we can do a better job to prevent child abuse."

Null said his goal is "to work myself out of a job."

Health and Welfare workers have been selling buttons that say "stamp out child abuse" to members of the community for $1 to raise funds for the child protection program. Other groups in the community also have been raising money to donate to the cause.

Dr. James Kircher, representing the Burley Presbyterian Church, donated $370 that members of the church had collected in their recent "Coins for Kids" campaign which asked families to put aside 2 cents per meal for three months.

Other contributors include Saint Nicholas Church in Rupert and the Racquetball Club in Burley.

Following the proclamation ceremony, Pam Denton and Lisa Kamachi helped kick off an "Exercise-A-Thon" by donating $233 to effort. Supporters exercised for four hours to solicit additional funds.

Local IDWR employees hope Wednesday's events will be only the beginning of fund-raising events in the Mini-Cassia area.

Shadduck said that he had instructed Chief Leman Messley to draw up a completely new salary schedule.

"As soon as we get to look at it, we'll determine which route to go," said Shadduck.

Fronk was asked about the puchase of a lawnmower by the city from an out-of-town supplier.

"I thought you said you were in favor of keeping the business at home," said Patrolman Jeff Packrell.

"I will support buying at home," said Fronk. He said he did not know why the specifications for the purchase were drawn up in a way that excluded local suppliers.

Another resident asked about the purchase of the mayor's car from the police budget.

Shadduck replied that most cities with a full-time mayor provide a car for their mayor. He said the police car he uses, along with two other police cars, did not really come from the police budget because all funds come from the general budget.

Peters' comments at the meeting were either general statements on the philosophy of city government or a reminiscence of what happened when he was in office.

When asked what supervisors he would change should he be elected, he said it would depend on his evaluations of each department.

Marketing

Wells said it will be difficult for the chamber to determine the immediate effect of the campaign on the resort's tourism. He said, however, they will "plant the seed" for more visitors in two to four years.

The chamber has received a preliminary commitment for another $30,000 from the city of Sun Valley for the marketing program, but it still needs a final commitment from the city, which has been in a legal battle surrounding its option tax.

Despite the size of the chamber's overall marketing campaign, Wells said the Sun Valley resort area's promotional effort is still only half that of other major ski resorts in the Intermountain region.

Warm Springs rezoning hearing is expected to produce hot debate

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A public hearing on the recommended rezone of land at the base of Bald Mountain in Ketchum's Warm Springs district has been set for Dec. 2 before the City Council.

However, members of the council are warning the rezone will not be automatic, even though the Planning and Zoning Commission recently recommended the rezone of low-density land near Sun Valley's ski lifts to high-density and tourist uses.

Councilman Jack Corrock, who has served on the council for most of the past 12 years, restated his disapproval of increasing the allowed number of dwelling units on any property in the Warms Springs area, despite the city's comprehensive plan that calling for high-density use in Sun Valley's ski lift area.

Corrock said Monday that Warm Springs property owners were forced to accept lower dwelling unit densities in a 1974 downzone of all land west of the Big Wood River. Now, he said, those "property owners are "giving it back" to Daon Corp., which is asking for the lift-area rezone.

"This is the first time I've see the city upzone any area in the city in 12 years," Corrock said.

Councilwoman Sue Wolford, the council's planning and zoning commissioner, said she told the planning body that three of four council members disapprove of an increase in density at the lift area, where Daon was denied a large, luxury hotel a year ago.

Wolford, Corrock and Councilman Tim Crawford have consistently stated they do not want to see an upzone of the area.

The three voted together to deny the hotel on the south side of Warm Springs Creek as a planned unit development, which allowed Daon to transfer dwelling unit densities from its property on the north side of the Creek.

The planning commission recently recommended the city rezone 5.9 acres of Daon's land for tourist uses and 2.5 acres for short-term occupancy, high-density uses. The tourist zone allows for higher densities and commercial uses aimed at serving the tourists.

The zoning change would affect all of Daon's property on the south side of the creek that is below the 25 percent slope line at the base of the mountain.

In all, the rezone of Daon on land would allow 158 more dwelling units than the agriculture-forest zone, which allows only one unit on 10 acres. The tourist zone allows one unit for each 2,000 square feet and the short-term occupancy, high-density zone allows one unit for each 3,000 square feet.

The planning board also recommended the city annex 13.9 acres of land owned by Daon. Only 4,300 square feet of the land, however, would be for short-term occupancy, high-density use. The remaining acreage would be a part of the agriculture-forest district.

Daon had asked the city to zone all the property below the 25 percent slope for tourist uses.

Not included in the public hearing is a rezone and annexation request by Mark Lloyd, who is asking to change five acres of agriculture-forest land to tourist use. Only 1.2 acres need to be annexed.

The planning commission, however, made a preliminary recommendation of a short-term occupancy, high-density zone for the Lloyd property.

After Lloyd failed to pay the application fee for rezone, the planning commission postponed a final recommendation on the property.

Planning and Zoning Administrator Garth McClure said he anticipates Lloyd will pursue the application, however.

Hazelton council is notified liability insurance extended

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON — Hazelton city council members have received notification that their liability insurance coverage has been reinstated until Jan. 1.

City Clerk Joan Wolfe says McDonald Insurance is the primary carrier with Home Insurance the reinsurer.

However, council members do not know if they will continue to have coverage after that time, so for now, they say they'll wait to see if a pool for city and county governments will be formed to handle liability insurance in the state.

In other business, Clint Watson, city marshall and working supervisor, asked council members for permission to buy a one-horse compressor to sandblast and repaint the city dumpsters. The council unanimously approved the request.

Watson says he will see that the work is done, making it much cheaper than buying new dumpsters.

A work session was scheduled for an update interview and possible raise recommendation for Watson, who was hired in July to replace retiring John L. Taylor.

AIDS column useful, but lacked symptoms list

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for devoting an entire column to AIDS. I learned a lot from your article, but you failed to list the symptoms. Please do. It would be helpful to a great number of your readers, including ...

— ME IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ME: Many of the AIDS symptoms are subtle and may only indicate simple, everyday ailments; therefore, you should be alerted but not alarmed if you have one or more of the following symptoms:

- Weight loss of more than 10 pounds during a period of less than two months, NOT related to diet or increased activity; prolonged loss of appetite.
- Unexplained, persistent or recurrent fevers or drenching night sweats.
- Swollen glands (lymph nodes found in the neck, armpits or groin) that persist and are unexplained by other illness.
- Profound fatigue that persists and is not explainable by physical activity, substance abuse or a psychological disorder.
- Persistent and unexplained diarrhea or bloody stools.
- A persistent, whitish coating (or spotting) on the tongue or in the throat, which may be accompanied by soreness or difficulty in swallowing.
- A heavy, persistent, dry cough that is not due to smoking and has lasted too long to be explained by a cold or flu (especially with shortness of breath).
- Easy bruising or unexplained bleeding from any orifice.
- Skin rashes or discolorations of the skin.
- Blurred vision and/or persistent, severe headaches.

It must be emphasized that each of these symptoms may appear in diseases that are NOT caused by or associated with AIDS. When not easily or otherwise explained, the persistence of one or more of these symptoms should be discussed with a health care provider who is familiar with AIDS.

A national hotline with an informative recording can be reached by calling 1-800-342-AIDS. Many cities have a local AIDS information hotline. Your telephone operator can advise you.

DEAR ABBY: About readers who hate your puns and those who love them: So far the score is 10,000,001-to-1 in your favor.

I don't believe a pun is the lowest form of humor. It could be verse.

FDA: spine X-rays can cause breast cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many young girls being treated for abnormally curved spines may be put at increased risk of breast cancer because of diagnostic X-ray exposure of their developing breast tissue, Food and Drug Administration scientists said Tuesday.

Young breast tissue is particularly sensitive to the cancer-causing effects of radiation and girls may receive the equivalent radiation of hundreds of chest X-rays during examinations to check their spines, they said.

Charles K. Showalter and Alvin W. Thomas of the FDA's Center for Devices and Radiological Health told a seminar that many physicians treating the curved spines caused by scoliosis do not appear to be taking extra radiation precautions with adolescent girls.

"We are trying to get the message out to people who do scoliosis radiology that they ought to be careful and use some simple techniques to reduce radiation exposure," Showalther said.

The techniques developed by the FDA scientists include using more sensitive X-ray films and screens that produce usable images with less radiation, using X-ray filters that target radiation past the breasts and breast shielding during imaging.

The scientists also suggested that female patients be turned around to get their X-rays from back to front instead of the traditional way of having the girls face the X-ray machine.

"Doctors are taught to have the back as close to the film as possible to get the clearest image," Thomas said. "But you don't need detailed, crisp images to follow the progress of scoliosis."

The scientists said all the methods they suggest are relatively inexpensive and could be used in any office with an X-ray machine. For example, lead-lined breast shields which drape over the patient like a vest cost less than $80, they said.

Although the increased breast cancer risk from scoliosis treatment appears small, they said, the National Institutes of Health has begun a follow-up study to determine the extent of latent effects. There is no evidence that the radiation would cause cancer to occur earlier than it normally would, but there is increased risk for a later cancer, they added.

Scoliosis is a condition of unknown cause that usually appears between the ages of 10 and 15, with 75 percent of the cases affecting girls. During this spurt of adolescent growth, the spine can bend to form "S" or "C" shapes that distort the back.

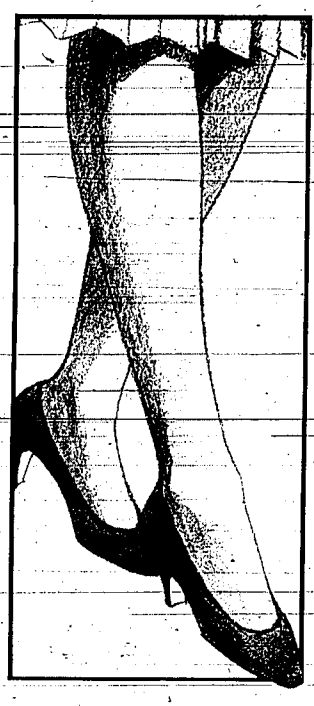

An estimated 600,000 patients are being treated or monitored for scoliosis at any one time in this country, experts say.

Glenns Ferry principal wrangles with tough issue of AIDS in school

By DIANA HOOLEY
Times-News correspondent

GLENNS FERRY — Elementary School Principal John Taggert presented the Glenns Ferry School Board with a preliminary proposal that would establish a policy for students with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and other communicable diseases.

Superintendent Jim Garrett told the board the Idaho Department of Education is urging school districts to begin policy discussions on this issue.

Taggart proposed that a student suspected of having AIDS be quarantined until the student could be examined by a team of qualified medical authorities. Some kind of homebound education could be arranged at a later date for the student, said Taggert.

"This is an emotionally charged issue, and we want to do everything we possibly can to support the infected student and his parents without forgetting the needs and safety of the rest of the students and school personnel," said Taggart.

He said there could be many legal ramifications if such a situation occurred in the district. For this purpose and as a show of good will, Taggart suggested that if the parents challenge the diagnosis the district should be willing to pay for a second opinion by a team of qualified medical specialists.

The board agreed to continue discussion on the formation of a policy on AIDS.

In other business:

• Garrett said the school is beginning a couple of programs to enhance the educational climate and broaden the school perspective. Garrett told the board an effort is under way to involve the community more in education by asking retired teachers who would be interested to teach a few classes on a very limited basis.

"We have a lot of talented retired teachers in the area who I think would enjoy getting back into the classroom for a little while, and I know the students would benefit," said Garrett.

Garrett also said plans are being made to hire substitutes occasionally to give teachers time away from class and bring them together to discuss and develop their craft.

• The board announced that Jerry Lister from Boise Pay Ada and the Boise Police would be coming soon to set up a network for parents and students having problems with drug and alcohol abuse.

Jerome's insurance is apparently extended

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The city of Jerome appears to have liability insurance for the remainder of the calendar year, according to Mayor Ralph Peters, who has explored many possible options for ensuring coverage since the city received a cancellation notice recently along with several other Idaho communities.

Peters told the City Council the class action suit filed against Colonial Penn on behalf of cities whose insurance was threatened was responsible for reinstatement of the liability insurance to the end of December.

Peters said the Idaho Department of Insurance is attempting to put together a pool of public entities who need liability insurance and are searching for a carrier for all those in the pool.

The pool is expected to have organizational details worked out by the middle of November, Peters said.

In other business:

• Council members voted to purchase a vibrating salt and sand spreader for $2,733 and agreed to advertise for bids to purchase a street sweeper. Sloan said it will take five months after the order is placed before the sweeper will be shipped.

The council also voted to have Sloan advertise for bids to purchase three pickup trucks and/or a police car. Bids for these vehicles will be opened on Nov. 19.

• Sloan reported that the bids for construction of the extension on the Jerome Civic Memorial Library will be opened on Oct. 22. Councilwoman Jeanne Vandiver reported that $8,269 has been raised toward the $51,000 matching funds for the library construction.

• Police Chief Daryl Cameron advised the council to hire Brett Reid as a part-time police officer. Reid has a total of six years in police work and will work on an "on call" basis.

Claim filed over tree-choppings

By JaNENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The Gooding City Council has denied a $180,000 tort claim filed by three Gooding couples embroiled in a lawsuit over two cottonwood trees.

Bruce and Amy Berry of Wendell filed the timber suit in June, claiming that on May 25 John Houser and John Wanamaker of Gooding cut down two trees on the Berry's property at 333 First Street, in Gooding, without the owner's knowledge or consent.

The suit further claims that the two cottonwood trees, "more than 100 feet tall," were then cut up and removed to be used by the defendants, again without the Berry's consent.

The third defendant, Roy Sears is alleged to have told the other two men they could cut down the trees and use the wood when he "knew, or should have known," the trees were on the Berry property, according to court records.

The defendants claim the trees were on public property — a Gooding city street right-of-way — and they had the permission of the city to remove them.

Mayor Gene Heller told the council at its regular meeting this month the trees were on a dedicated city street easement, but the city was in no way involved in the removal.

The council voted to deny the tort claim, which asked for $60,000 for each defendant.

Heller said last week the trees had been identified by city crews as potentially hazardous, but the city had not ordered their removal, nor given written permission for anyone to take such action.

City Attorney Cecil Hobdey said the notice of tort claim is a necessary step to bring suit against the city but added the defendants will not take such action unless there is a judgement brought against them in the Berry suit.

The Berrys claim the trees were on their property and are asking for $31,500, or triple the value of the trees for timber trespass, $30,000 for personal distress at the loss of the trees and damage to their property, $25,000 in punative damages as well as attorney's fees and court costs.

The Berrys are represented by the Twin Falls law firm of Hepworth, Nungester and Felton.

Jerome attorney Greg Fuller is representing the three Gooding couples.

No trial date has been set for the case.

District court

TWIN FALLS — The following criminal cases were recently heard in 5th District Court in Twin Falls:

Charles Edward Freeman, 42, Rt. 1, Rogerson, was granted a suspended sentenced by 5th District Judge Daniel C. Hurlbutt Jr. for lewd conduct with a minor. Freeman was placed on four-years probation and ordered to pay $30 per month supervision fees, $50 per hour to the public defender, to seek evaluation at the Port of Hope for substance abuse and participate in rehabilitation programs. Freeman was also ordered to refrain from consuming any alcoholic beverages, maintain full-time employment or attend school and continue sex offender therapy at his own expense.

Brian Dean Tucker, 19, 430 2nd Ave. E., Twin Falls, was ordered to serve two years at the Idaho State Penitentary for first-degree burglary but received a suspended sentence and was placed on two-years probation by District Judge Hurlbutt. The defendant was ordered to pay $30 per month supervision fees, $50 per month to the public defender, $95 restitution to the victim and seek Port of Hope evaluation. Tucker was also ordered to seek full-time employment or attend school and to refrain from consuming any alcoholic beverages.

Jimmy Dale Coates, 21, 446 2nd Ave E., Twin Falls, having returned from serving 120 days at Cottonwood for grand theft, entered a plea of guilty. Judge Hurlbutt ordered Coates' probation continued for three years.

Stephen Thomas Victor, 36, Rt. 2, Buhl, entered a plea of not guilty to aggravated assault and was released on his own recognizance pending trial. Victor allegedly threatened another person with a revolver, with the intent to cause bodily harm.

Jerry Lynn Healy, 18, Hansen, entered a plea of guilty to grand theft. Healy allegedly stole a motorcycle from Donald Healy. The court requested a pre-sentence report and remanded the defendant to the custody of the sheriff.

Michael Mayer, 35, 156 Madison, Twin Falls, entered a plea of guilty to grand theft and was sentenced by 5th District Judge Daniel B. Meehl to an eight-year indeterminate sentence, which was then suspended. The defendant was placed on a two-year probation and ordered to pay $30 a month to the Dept. of Probation, $250 restitution to U-Haul, and to remain drug and alcohol free as well as not to frequent any establishment where alcoholic beverages are sold.

Jack Douglas McCormick, 52, address unknown, entered a plea of guilty to forgery of a credit card. Meehl ordered a pre-sentence report, and the defendant was remanded to the custody of the sheriff.

Computer issues set pace again on Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — Computer and technology issues set the pace as the stock market pushed ahead for the second straight session Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up .22 on Tuesday, rose another 2.80 to 1,367.16, creeping near the record closing high of 1,369.29 it reached last Thursday.

Other, broader measures, which remain well below their mid-summer highs, generally showed better percentage gains in a fairly active session.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange reached 121.65 million shares, up from 111.29 million the day before.

Before the market opened, the government reported that new orders for durable goods fell 1.1 percent in September.

However, the Commerce Department figures showed that the decline was due entirely to a drop in the volatile data for defense capital goods. Excluding the defense sector, the department said, orders rose 0.7 percent.

As a result, Wall Streeters generally viewed the report as positive for the economic outlook.

Computer and technology issues were strong for the second straight day in the wake of a better-than-expected earnings report from Digital Equipment. Digital gained 1⅛ to 111⅞; International Business Machines 1⅜ to 130½; Texas Instruments 1¾ to 94½; Hewlett-Packard 1 to 31⅝, and Data General 1¼ to 40¾.

Fireman's Fund led the active list, trading at 27¾. A 1.56 million-share block changed hands at 26¼.

The stock came to market in a 32 million-share offering from American Express, which retains a 45 percent interest in the property and casualty insurance company.

Santa Fe Southern Pacific fell ⅝ to 32½ in active trading. The Justice Department opposed on antitrust grounds the railroad merger that created the company in its present form.

Phibro-Salomon rose ⅝ to 37¼. The company reported third-quarter earnings of 94 cents a share, up from 83 cents in the comparable period last year.

Exxon rose ⅛ to 53⅞ despite the company's report of lower profits for the third quarter.

Munford Inc., which said its quarterly net fell to 22 cents a share from 48 cents in the like period a year ago, dropped 1¾ to 17.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, about four issues rose in price for every three that gave ground. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks added .52 to 109.17.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 146.19 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 1.07 to 210.69.

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Transportation Department on Wednesday endorsed the proposed merger of the Atchison, Topkea & Santa Fe Railroad and the Southern Pacific rail system even though the Justice Department has concluded the deal would substantially reduce competition and should be rejected.

The two departments disagreed sharply on the competitive effect of the merger of the two Western railroads in petitions filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which must approve the combination.

While agreeing that the merger would result in some reduced competition, the Transportation Department said the impact would involve only about 3 percent of the total traffic now carried by the two railroads and could be solved by various restrictions being placed on the merger.

The department's assessment of the merger, which would result in the creation of country's third largest railroad system, followed by a day the Justice Department anti-trust division conclusion that the deal would lead to a "massive loss of competition" in many areas of the country.

"Except in those relatively rare situation where competition is reduced, the merger is consistent with the public interest," the Transportation Department said Wednesday.

Southern Pacific Co., and Santa Fe Industries Inc., the parent companies of the two railroads, agreed in December 1983 to merge and began combining their corporations. The rail operations have remained separate, however, pending approval from the ICC, which has jurisdiction over rail mergers.

Both railroads run from California to the Midwest with the Southern Pacific terminating in New Orleans and the Santa Fe in Chicago. The two systems includes long stretches of parallel tracks including along the rail corridor linking central California and a key gateway at Ogden, Utah.

The Transportation Department in its brief to the ICC said there are sufficient "possible remedies" to the anti-competitive questions the merger raises including potential divestiture of tracks, granting of trackage rights or other arrangements with other railroads or freight forwarders.

"Under this approach, the shipping public will be assured that an effective competitor is introduced into the market," the Transportation Department said. It said the merger should be approved immediately with the ICC restricting rates along some routes until a "pro-competitive agreement" can be put into place to deal with any reduced competition.

In its brief submitted Tuesday, the Justice Department suggested that the competitive impact of the merger would be much broader and would result in what Assistant Attorney General Douglas Ginsburg called "real, direct and non-speculative" antitrust problems.

The Justice Department argued that the merger "would adversely affect competition in markets throughout the geographic network of the two railroads" and not be isolated as suggested by the Transportation Department.

Workers may be on job by Monday

Chrysler, union reach contract terms

By EDWARD MILLER
The Associated Press

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. — Chrysler Corp. and the United Auto Workers agreed Wednesday on a tentative contract for 70,000 strikers, giving them wage parity with other autoworkers plus a $2,000 bonus to make up for concessions granted when the automaker faced bankruptcy.

However, the UAW did not get guarantees against job-threatening subcontracting and the company lost its bid for Japanese-style job classes.

Chrysler said the three-year agreement would cost the company at least $1 billion more than the contract that expired last week.

If ratified, the agreement would give each U.S. Chrysler worker an immediate minimum of $2,000 cash to compensate for the $1 billion in contract concessions that workers granted the company during its brush with bankruptcy.

Industry analysts said the pact generally would allow Chrysler to stay competitive with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. but may do little, if anything, to allow Chrysler to make inroads against the labor-cost advantages of the Japanese.

Separate strikes here and in Canada, which began Oct. 16, will have cost the No.3 automaker more than $100 million in lost profits by the end of the week. A new contract for 10,000 Canadian workers was ratified Monday and they returned to work.

"We're pleased with any settlement. I mean, strikes are terrible," Chrysler chief negotiator Thomas Miner said at a news conference. "We lost a lot of money and, in a short time, we would have lost a lot more."

The UAW's Chrysler Council of 170 local union leaders meets Thursday in Detroit to review the tentative contract and recommend it for rank-and-file ratification this weekend. UAW President Owen Bieber said he expected the agreement to pass, with workers returning on morning shifts Monday.

Miner said Chrysler didn't gain the reductions in job classifications that it had sought but would pursue the issue in local negotiations. The company, in the pursuit of higher productivity, had wanted about 500 job classes reduced to six to eight.

"We would have liked to have seen a lot more in the agreement ... that would improve productivity," Miner said. However, he said, it contained some language that was "a good start" toward such improvements.

Like the GM and Ford pacts, the Chrysler agreement contains penalty payments for excessive overtime and a large fund, called a job bank, to pay for the retraining of high-seniority workers displaced by automation and productivity improvements.

The company also agreed by letter to discuss with the UAW its dismay over Chrysler's subcontracting of work to outside suppliers, a major union issue. Union sources said the UAW will rely on the letter and the job bank fund to curb subcontracting, or at least retrain or make payments to workers displaced by the practice.

Contract letters and job bank funds at GM and Ford haven't curbed subcontracting by those companies.

Neither side released details of the agreement, pending the ratification vote. However, Miner and Bieber discussed it in general terms at a news conference that followed a 42-hour bargaining session.

Other contract areas roughly follow the industry pattern established a year ago at GM and Ford, where workers now make an average $13.29 an hour, the union said.

Oil company attempts to reduce debts

Phillips sells over $1 billion in assets

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Officials of Phillips Petroleum Co. said Tuesday the company has either sold or agreed to sell over $1 billion in assets as part of an attempt to reduce debt incurred during a restructuring program completed earlier this year.

Company officials also identified the additional assets the company needs to sell in order to reach its goal of $2 billion in asset sales by mid-1986.

According to C.J. Silas, Phillips' chairman and chief executive officer, the most recent transaction occurred last week when Phillips agreed in principle to sell the outstanding stock of its subsidiary, Geysers Geothermal Co., and other geothermal properties, to Freeport-McMoRan Inc.

Freeport-McMoRan, a New Orleans based energy company, will pay Phillips $215 million for the properties.

Silas said the oil company is in the process of selling its 35 percent interest in an undeveloped section of the North Sea T-Block oil field. The sale must be approved by Phillips' partners, the government of Great Britain.

"Additional sales during the remainder of 1985 should permit the company to exceed the $1 billion mark by year end," said Silas.

The financial restructuring of Phillips took place after investor groups led by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr. and New York financier Carl Icahn made attempts in 1984 and earlier this year to take over the oil company.

The battles ended when the company announced a plan to purchase $4.5 billion in common stock with debt securities.

Last month, the company announced the sell of stock of a former Aminoil subsidiary to Newmont Oil Co., a subsidiary of Newmont Mining Co., for $165 million. Aminoil held interest in oil and gas properties in the Netherlands.

Silas said the sales combined with the additional assets to be sold will allow Phillips to "comfortably reach our goal of $2 billion in asset sales by mid-1986."

"These sales will have a minimal impact on our cash flow. Likewise, the effect on our net income will be minimal, after taking into account the drop in interest expense that will result from our debt reduction," he said.

The other assets to be sold by Phillips include:

- Exploration and production assets in Canada.
- Interests in oil producing properties offshore California and Texas, the Cutbank area of Montana and the Ratherford production unit in Utah.
- Interest in oil and gas producing properties in south Arkansas and Colorado.
- Its Williston, N.D., gas processing plant to Koch Industries.
- Interest in Eloi Bay and Hall Moon Fields in the Gulf of Mexico to Texas International Co.
- Interest in selected undeveloped leases in the Beaufort Sea.

Silas added that interest has been expressed in the company's Pier 66 Hotel and Marina in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and in Phillips' domestic fertilizer operations.

The Northwest Quarter (NW¼), and the North-half of the Southwest Quarter (N½SW¼) Section 36, Township 9 South, Range 20 East, B.M., containing 240 acres, more or less. Subject to State of Idaho Easement No. 51 for a railroad. APPRAISED PRICE: $41,280.00, plus lessee improvement credit for fence in the amount of $1,647.00. Any additional lessee improvement credit will be announced on day of sale.

No one individual, company, or corporation may purchase more than 320 acres of public school or indemnity school land from the State. This acreage limitation upon purchase of these endowment lands in an absolute, not an annual limit. Any individual, company, or corporation intending to bid at this sale will be required to sign an affidavit to the effect that they have not exceeded this acreage limitation by previous purchases from the State, nor will they if they are the successful bidder at this sale. Also, that they are not attempting to make any such purchase for, or on behalf of, any person, company, or corporation which will, if the purchase, exceed the 320-acre limitation. Contact regarding bidding on this sale may determine their status on this matter by contacting the Boise office of the Department of Lands at least seven days prior to the sale date.

TERMS OF SALE

This land to be sold as one unit as listed above, and no bid of less than the appraised price will be accepted.

Purchaser will be solely responsible for access to the land. The State assumes no responsibility for providing access to the land sold.

The State of Idaho will not accept bids from any person, party or corporation who at the time of sale is delinquent with payment on existing State contracts.

One tenth (1/10) of the purchase price and interest at Nine and One-half (9½%) on balance of principal for remainder of year, cash on day of sale, balance in Twenty (20) annual installments at Nine and One-half (9½%) interest, (certified checks or postal money orders accepted as cash for 10% of appraised value. Personal checks accepted for any amount due over and above 10% of appraised value). Annual installments are due at the beginning of each year with both principal and interest payable in advance.

Each bidder is required to make a deposit with the selling agent in the amount of 10% of the appraised value of the land at or before the time of making his first bid, as a guarantee that if he is the successful bidder he will execute a contract for the purchase of said land according to the terms under which it is offered in the advertisement for sale by the State of Idaho. Should the successful bidder fail to complete a contract for purchase of these lands, the full amount of said deposit will be immediately declared forfeited to the State of Idaho, without further action on the part of the State, as liquidated damages for such failure to complete the sale.

All deposits of unsuccessful bidders will be returned on day of sale. Purchaser will pay advertising costs in one newspaper in full on day of sale. Lessee's improvements to be paid for in full on day of sale.

All mineral rights, including sand, gravel, pumice and all Geothermal Resources are reserved to the State of Idaho.

All sales are made subject to any valid interfering rights which may have existed prior to date of sale except those for which allowance is made herewith.

The State of Idaho expressly disclaims the accuracy of the acreage specified in this unit.

NOTICE OF PROMULGATION OF PROPOSED NEW RULE ID TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT

In accordance with Section 67-5203, Idaho Code notice is hereby given that the Idaho Transportation Board intends to promulgate the following new rule under authority of Sections 67-5202, 49-405 and 49-409, Idaho Code:

Rule No. 39.01.32.19 – Registration and Titling of Motor Vehicles Manufactured in the United States.

The rule governs the processing and issuance of registration and titles of imported motor vehicles manufactured for sale in a country other than the United States. The rule prevents a noncomplying vehicle from being registered or titled in Idaho unless safety and emission standards are met. The rule does allow for temporary registration for up to six months.

In accordance with Section 67-5203, Idaho Code notice is hereby given that the Idaho Transportation Board intends to promulgate the following new rule under authority of Sections 49-409 and 49-434, Idaho Code:

Rule No. 39.01.32.20 – Motor Vehicle Registration Procedures When Department is Unsatisfied as to Ownership or Security Interests.

The new rule provides for temporary registration of a vehicle when ownership is in doubt. The rule does not apply to licensed auto dealers, nonresidents; or owners and/or operators of commercial and noncommercial vehicles operated in interstate commerce under the various proportional registration plans or agreements with other states.

In accordance with Section 67-5203, Idaho Code notice is hereby given that the Idaho Transportation Board intends to promulgate the following new rule under authority of Sections 49-102b, 49-127B and 49-127(d), Idaho Code:

Rule No. 39.01.32.21 – Proportionally Registered Vehicles are Required to Pay Use Fee.

The rule clarifies that commercial vehicles registered under Section 49-147B, Idaho Code, are required to pay use fee under Section 49-127(d), Idaho Code.

Interested parties may review the proposed rule of the Idaho Transportation Department at 3311 West State Street, Boise, Idaho. A public hearing will be held, if requested, by the requisite number of persons or organizations. Written comments may be mailed to the Executive Assistant to the Idaho Transportation Board, PO Box 7129, Boise, Idaho 83707. NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Monday, the 10th day of February, 1986 at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A.M. of said day, at the Main Front Door of the Twin Falls County Courthouse, located at Shoshone Street and Fourth Avenue, City of Twin Falls, County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, an Idaho Corporation, as successor trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to-wit:

Lot 10, Block 1, VILLA VISTA SUBDIVISION NO. 3, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the plat thereof recorded in Volume 12 of Plats, Page 56, records of said County.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by LLOYD WATSON and LORRI CYD WATSON, husband and wife; and WALTER E. EAGLE and ELLA M. EAGLE, husband and wife grantor, to TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, an Idaho Corporation as successor trustee, for the benefit and security of FIRST INTERSTATE BANK OF IDAHO, NATIONAL ASSOCIATION, as beneficiary, dated May 25, 1983 recorded June 1, 1983 as Instrument No. 840908 in Volume at page, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

The default for which this sale is to be made is being the failure to comply with the terms of Deed of Trust Note dated May 25, 1983, and modified by Modification Agreement dated March 15, 1984, by Modification Agreement dated September 4, 1984, and by Modification Agreement dated April 10, 1985, wherein the principal balance was due and payable on June 1, 1985. Grantor has failed to pay said balance and by reason of said default, the Beneficiary declares the entire principal balance in the amount of $34,500.00 now due; plus property taxes for the year 1984, of which the second half is delinquent; plus accumulated late charges; plus any other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure. The accrued interest is at the rate of Prime plus 2%, and the balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $34,500.00 plus accrued interest at Prime plus 2% from July 25, 1985.

Dated October 4, 1985.

TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, Trustee

Trust Officer

PUBLISH: Thursday, October 17, 24, 31, and November 7, 1985.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Tuesday, the 11th day of January, 1988 at the hour of 11:00 o'clock A.M., of said day, in the Lobby of the Office of TitleFact, Inc., located at 163 4th Ave. North Street in Twin Falls, County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, PIONEER TITLE COMPANY OF ADA COUNTY, as trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to-wit:

The West 135.5 feet of the South ½ of the South ½ of Lot 8 HILL TRACT SUBDIVISION NO. 2, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the official plat thereof, recorded in Book 1 of Plats, page 53, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by ANNABELLE L. REEVES, a widow grantor, to TitleFact, Inc., as trustee, for the benefit and security of FIRST AMERICAN MORTGAGE COMPANY OF IDAHO, INC., recorded March 19, 1985 as Instrument No. 877540 in Volume at page, Mortgage records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

The default for which this sale is to be made is failure to:

make principal and interest payments as set forth on Deed of Trust note secured by said Deed of Trust. The original loan amount was $17,400.00 with interest thereon at the rate of 18% per annum as evidenced by Note dated March 19, 1985. Monthly payment of $280.22 is due for June, 1985 and each and every month thereafter continuing until paid. By reason of said default, the beneficiary has exercised its option in the Note to declare the entire indebtedness, accrued interest, late charges and all costs and fees associated with this foreclosure to be due and payable and the balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $17,400.00 plus accruing interest, late charges and all costs and fees associated with this foreclosure.

Dated September 9, 1985.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF SALE
FORECLOSURE OF DEED OF TRUST
ON REAL PROPERTY
PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on Monday the 10th day of February, 1986, at the hour of 11:00 o'clock a.m. of said day at the office of First American Title Company, 1136 Blue Lakes Boulevard, Twin Falls, Idaho, Archie W. Service, a member of the Idaho Bar, as trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and more particularly described as follows:

Lot 14 in Block 11 of Bickel Addition, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the plat thereof, recorded in Book 3 of Plats, page 19, records of said County.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligations secured by and pursuant to the power of said sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Read R. Reams, ex ux., whose given name is Inez Reams, husband and wife, as Grantor, to Archie W. Service, a member of the Idaho Bar, as Trustee, for the benefit and security of H & N Wholesalers, an Idaho corporation, d/b/a Norman Supply, recorded on the 23rd day of March, 1982, as Instrument Number 816870 in Book Number 216 of Mortgages of the official records of the County Recorder of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

The default for which said sale is being made is as follows:

Grantor's failure to make the required monthly payments for January, 1984, and every month thereafter, said payments for each month being the amount of $300.00, resulting in a balance due as of June 30, 1985, in the sum of $8,232.84, plus interest, costs and fees accruing thereafter.

Notice of default and election of sale under said Deed of Trust was recorded on the 17th day of September, 1985, in Book 219 as Instrument Number 888171 official records of the County Recorder of Twin Falls County, State of Idaho.

The sum due and owing on said obligation, to-wit:

The principal loan balance of $7,516.88 as of April 30, 1983, plus accrued unpaid interest in the amount of $715.96 for a total of $8,232.84 as of June 30, 1985, with interest accruing thereafter at the rate of 13% per year, together with attorney's fees, trustee's fees and costs of foreclosure.

DATED This 25th day of September, 1985.

THE ACES©

BOBBY WOLFF

"Logical consequences are the scarecrows of fools and the beacons of wise men."

— Thomas H. Huxley.

What happens if South plays his ace of trumps too early? He should consider the consequences before he makes the play.

South ruffed the heart queen and cashed dummy's two high trumps, hoping to drop a doubleton queen. Next he started clubs, and West took his ace and cashed the high trump. Another heart lead forced South's last trump and South lost control.

South holds:

Vulnerable: Both. Dealer: West.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1♥	Dbl.	2♥	3♥
Pass	3 NT	Pass	4♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

ANSWER: Pass. North's jump shows 16-18 support points, but this hand has little to contribute.

He could manage only eight tricks and went two down.

Would South have succeeded had the trump queen dropped? Not likely, since he couldn't afford to draw the last trump anyway. South's play of the second high trump was therefore a play that had no chance to gain.

After cashing one high trump, declarer should lead a diamond to knock out the ace. West continues hearts and South ruffs. The club ace is attacked and West forces South to ruff a third heart. Now it's safe for South to draw that second trump before cashing the minor suit winners. The defenders get only two aces and the queen of trumps, and South scores his vulnerable game.

Tudor masters K.C.; Cards 1 away

Forsch faces Jackson in possible season finale

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — John Tudor pitched his typical, classic game, got anything but typical support from the rest of the St. Louis Cardinals and put Kansas City in a classic — and for them typical — World Series corner Wednesday night.

Set against the backdrop of Tudor's dominating five-hitter, the St. Louis offense awoke with rare home runs by Tito Landrum and Willie McGee, easing to a 3-0 triumph over the Royals.

The Cards, leading the best-of-seven Series 3-1, moved within one victory of their second Series championship in four years.

"All we've got to do now is win one more," said Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog.

"Our magic number is down to one," echoed catcher Tom Nieto.

The Cardinals, with an offense built on speed and line drives, scored their first two runs on the solo homers by Landrum and McGee. Their third run was a more typical St. Louis effort, scoring on a triple by Terry Pendleton and a full-count suicide squeeze bunt by Nieto.

Still, there was caution from the Cardinals, who remember only too well that while they, themselves, have come back this season, so have the Royals, who were down three games to one to Toronto in the American League playoffs.

"I don't think we've accomplished anything until the Series is over," Tudor said. "I can't think about what I've done because I may have to go out and do it again."

Only five teams, the last being the 1979 Pittsburgh Pirates, have teams recovered from a 3-1 deficit in the Series.

"It's hardly the same," Howser said, comparing the Series to the playoffs. "People say we've been down before. We have, and we've got some confidence from it. But this situation is different. This is the big one. This is for the whole ball of wax."

The Cardinals can wrap it up Thursday night, when they will send right-hander Bob Forsch, 9-6, a two-game loser when the Cardinals won the 1982 Series in seven games over Milwaukee, against Royals left-hander Danny Jackson, 14-12 and the loser of Game 1.

Tudor, 21-8 during the season and 3-1 in the postseason, was virtually untouchable in this one, his second Series victory in two starts. He struck out eight and walked one batter, while allowing four singles and a double. Tudor has started four of the Cardinals' 10 postseason games.

"I told (pitching coach) Mike Roarke coming into the dugout before the game, it's kind of scary having my good stuff again," Tudor said, "because now I don't have any excuses. I had real good stuff.

"I think I threw just about as well as I'm capable of," Tudor said.

Tudor never really was in trouble until the seventh when the Royals loaded the bases with two out on a pair of singles and a walk to slugger Steve Balboni. But Tudor got out of it when pinch-hitter Hal McRae grounded into a forceout at third, and Tudor had the first World Series shutout since Scott McGregor of Baltimore blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 5-0 in Game 5 of the 1983 classic.

Tudor said he wasn't too happy to see McRae, a designated hitter in this DH-less World Series, come to bat in that inning.

"I tried to pitch around Balboni until I saw McRae take off his jacket," Tudor said. "After that, I just tried to go after him."

While the Cardinals' offensive effort — with only six hits themselves — resembled something less than all-out warfare, it was a marked contrast to the first three games, in which they batted .198 as a team with little run-scoring efficiency.

Landrum, who was forced into action to replace injured leadoff hitter Vince Coleman, homered on a 1-2 pitch from Royals left-hander Bud Black in the second inning. McGee hit one off Black in the third, and the surprise squeeze came in the fifth as the Cardinals made the most of their opportunities.

"I've been fortunate throughout my career," Landrum said. "It took me a while to get to the major leagues, and when I finally made it, they (the Cardinals) had patience with me. I think it's paid off for both of us."

If the Cardinals should go on to win the Series in five, they would be the third consecutive team to do so. The Orioles won in five over Philadelphia in 1983, and Detroit did it to San Diego last year.

Howser said he wasn't surprised by the power of Landrum and McGee, "but even with the home runs, we're still in the game."

For the first time in this Series, the Cardinals broke on top, on Landrum's one-out homer in the second. Jack Clark had struck on a checked swing, and Black, who had allowed 17 homers this year, had the count full against Landrum before offering the home run pitch.

Landrum stroked the ball, almost gently it seemed, but it set off on a parabolic arc toward the standing-room-only level below the first deck in right field, fair by about 20 feet and easily out of the park.

St. Louis Cardinal ace John Tudor was nearly untouchable Wednesday night, hurling the first World Series shutout since Scott McGregor blanked Philadelphia in 1983

Elquist runs Oakley toward title bid

Small speedster nears point mark

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Oakley High tailback Joel Elquist is a soft-spoken young man who believes in setting goals, and working hard toward their accomplishment.

"Having a winning season at least, taking the league, getting back to the state championship game, and becoming the all-time leading scorer in Oakley history," were the objectives he cited for his final prep campaign.

In amassing more than 1,100 yards rushing through eight games while leading top-ranked Oakley to an unbeaten record and a second consecutive Magic Valley Conference championship, the 17-year old speedster handily surpassed the first two objectives. A return to the state title game hinges on a Nov. 9 state semifinal clash with District 3 Class A-4 champ Wilder.

Having produced 94 points this year, Elquist currently ranks fifth in his quest for the school's scoring mark and needs 30 points to eclipse the record.

Elquist's football career began in elementary school playing in Pony League competition against other Cassia County teams. He evolved as a running back in junior high, then, as a freshman, filled the role of reserve tight end on the varsity. During the following summer he attended his a football camp at Boise State University, receiving instruction as a tight end. Work on the family ranch, he said, has precluded further formal training.

Don Tompkins arrived to assume the head coaching reins in Joel's sophomore season and moved him to running back in a wishbone offense. He adjusted quickly to his new position, flourishing as a runner.

For the past two seasons Oakley has operated out of an I formation and Elquist has been the catalyst at tailback. In those two years, the Hornets have lost just once — to Mullan in the 1984 state championship game.

Elquist said a weight training program improved his strength and augmented his speed.

Lee Neumann, head coach at Murtaugh, confirmed that assessment.

"What makes him outstanding is he's a hard runner who plays tough every down. He keeps his legs going and won't go down with one tackle. He's quick and mobile as well and he runs harder this year that ever."

Asked how the Hornets compensate for opponents stacking their defenses to stop Elquist, Tompkins said, "We sometimes throw a little to our backs in the flat or use counters, but mostly just run Joel right at them.

"He will get four or five yards anyway and, if they don't put two linebackers in front of (tackle John) Oldham, he can run behind him all day," Tompkins said.

Hagerman Coach Clark Muscat agreed.

"I think the main thing against us has been his quick feet. He's a good north-south runner and behind that big Oakley line he uses so well it's hard to get to him. He hits the hole as quick as can be."

Elquist attributes all of his success to his offensive line.

"Joel just tells me to isolate the linebacker and, if I do it, he does the rest," said Oldham.

At 5-foot-10, 155 pounds, Elquist is small for his position.

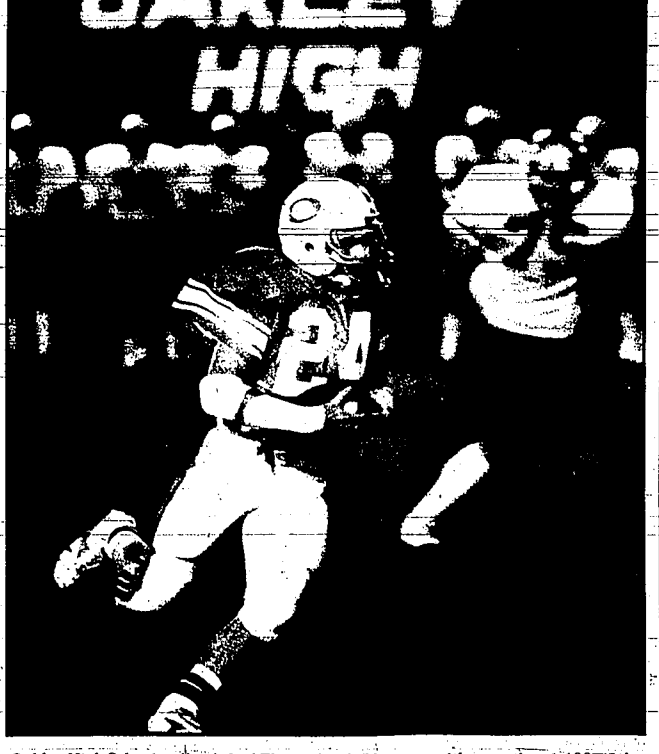

"I'm sure he can get up to 175 easily and, with this speed, play well as a cornerback or safety at the college level," said Tompkins. "He has great hands, and that could help on offense too."

Elquist is a starting cornerback and is occasionally called upon as safety in the Hornets' 5-3 defense.

As yet, he has received no scholarship offers, although he plans to goto college and would like to major in accounting.

"I'll probably come back here and take over the ranch someday, but there isn't much money in that anymore so I'm looking at other areas."

"Joel is a very good student," says Oakley High Principal J.B. Smith. "He has a lot of desire to excel in everything that he does."

Oakley High School tailback Joel Elquist has led his team with more than 1,100 yards

Bruins set to host 'nemesis' Broncos in '85 home finale

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The 1985 Twin Falls Bruins display their talents on the home field for the final time Friday when they entertain the playoff-bound Blackfoot Broncos at 7:30 p.m. at Bruin Field.

"They've been a nemesis for us the past three years," Twin Falls Coach Bill Jones says of the Broncos. "We've managed to nip them each time but in each instance we went into the game feeling confident of more than 27-26, 28-26 and 20-14 victories. We expect the same type of game Friday."

What that says is if Blackfoot is a nemesis, then his Bruins must at an enigma. Regardless of the caliber of competition, Twin Falls — with just two exceptions — has managed to find ways to lose by narrow margins. Last week it was the same thing — the Bruins giving up a 42-yard march to Capital in the final five minutes to drop a 10-7 decision.

The preamble to that drive left a bad taste in Twin Falls' collective mouth — the Bruins being charged with a muffed punt that gave Capital the ball on the 42.

Game films have substantiated Jones' sideline contention that Capital did not give the Twin Falls receiver sufficient room to make a called-for fair catch and that the ball bounced off an Eagle player, not a Bruin.

"It's a terrible call. Much worse than the one in Pocatello," Jones said. "But what are we going to do about it? The final score is 10-7. I suppose the thing that annoyed me the most was the official told me Capital didn't have a player within five yards of our receiver and the ball had to hit one of us.

"But here's the other thing you can't lose sight of," Jones continued. "Even after that, they had to go 42 yards and we took it down to fourth down and didn't make the plays. We could have absorbed the poor call and still won, so I can't say that call cost us the game."

But there's no doubt Jones wonders how his Bruins are going to perform each week. They've held the lead in all but one game and have lost four of them by a total of 9 points — including one in overtime.

Harriers to run after state titles Saturday

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Two defending champions and an heir apparent top the individuals and Borah and Highland are expected to repeat team victories when the 1985 Idaho State Cross Country Class A and B finals are run Saturday at Jerome Country Club.

Shawn Sintay won the Class A girls title in leading Borah to the team title last year and all five of those scoring for the Lions are back this time around.

Jerome, headed by 1984 champion and still a junior, Laura Jensen, will be seeking to supplant Wood River as the class B girls team titlist.

In the boys division, Highland looms as the team to watch, headed by senior Rob Rene who finished second to teammate Marty Stroschein last year.

And the Jerome boys will be after their 13th team championship in the B division.

The running begins at 1 p.m. with the Class B girls finals, followed at 30-minute intervals by the A girls, B boys and A boys.

Of note, the Twin Falls girls, who have won seven state titles, have a little extra incentive perhaps in the fact that they are one team title behind Glasgow, Mont., for the most all-time state titles nationwide. The Jerome girls have five, which places them fifth on that list.

Jerome boys' record of 12 state titles has them in seventh place overall, according to figures provided by the Idaho High School Activities Association.

Because of the Twin Falls Invitational two weeks ago, the line on the A division appears more definite to dopesters. However, a couple of teams, including usually strong Meridian, did not participate in that event and the northern schools were absent.

On the basis of the Twin Falls Invitational, Bruin sophomore Jenny Hannah appears to have a good bead on the runner-up spot. Sintay seems to rank as an odds-on favorite, barring injury.

The individual girls Class A race should be tough as Hannah will be

PGA Player of the Year title at stake for Wadkins in finale

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Lanny Wadkins will be attempting to nail down PGA Player of the Year honors — and possibly the money-winning title — this week in the season-ending Seiko Tucson Match Play Championship.

"Winning Player of the Year would be quite a distinction," Wadkins said before a practice round for the rich Match Play event that begins Thursday on the Randolph Park Municipal course.

"It's something I'd like to win, an honor I'd like to have. I've come this far and I don't want to let it get away," Wadkins said.

He took the lead in the Player of the Year standings with his third victory of the season earlier this month in the Walt Disney World Classic.

Wadkins now leads runner-up Calvin Peete by 10 points with this event the last remaining official tournament on the 10-month tour schedule.

"The only way Calvin can catch me is to win the tournament," Wadkins said.

Wadkins, one of the game's better match-play performers, also has a chance to overtake Curtis Strange on the final money-winning list. Strange, with a record $542,321 in official earnings, has ended his season. Wadkins is second with $444,393 and can move into the No. 1 position only by taking the $150,000 winner's check.

"Stranger things have happened," Wadkins said. "I'm playing pretty good right now. We'll just have to wait and see."

The tournament, offering more than $1-million in total prize money, has brackets both for the 64 regular tour players and for 16 Seniors.

The Seniors, competing for $300,000, will play one round daily Thursday through Saturday, with the semifinals Sunday morning and the final match, offering $75,000 to the winner, Sunday afternoon.

The format for the regular tour, with a total of $750,000 to be distributed, has first round play Thursday — two rounds — Friday, quarterfinals Saturday, and semifinals and the final match Sunday.

Tom Watson, the defending champion, plays Lon Hinkle in first round action.

Some other opening matches have PGA champion Hubert Green playing Canadian Dave Barr, Wadkins vs. Bob Tway, Peete vs. George Archer, Fuzzy Zoeller vs. Clarence Rose and U.S. Open champ Andy North vs. Keith Fergus.

In Seniors play, defending champion Gene Littler goes against Pete Brown in first round action and Australian Peter Thomson, winner of nine Seniors titles this year, plays Jimmy Powell.

ABC will provide national television coverage of portions of play Saturday and Sunday.

Knicks coach steamed over fine levied against rookie star Ewing

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks Coach Hubie Brown says he can't understand why rookie center Patrick Ewing was fined $1,500 for fighting Indiana's Steve Stipanovich in a National Basketball Association exhibition game.

"I'm stunned, completely stunned," Brown said after the fine was announced by the NBA Tuesday. "How can anyone say Patrick instigated the fight is beyond me. He was jumped from behind, thrown to the floor and injured, and he was fined more than the guy who did that to him. Our management must take a strong stand on this."

The incident took place Saturday night at Madison Square Garden.

Stipanovich was fined a total of $1,000, $750 for escalating the incident and $250 for automatic ejection. The 7-foot Ewing was fined $1,250 for starting the fight and $250 for automatic ejection. The Knicks' Rory Sparrow was fined $500 for jumping into the confrontation.

Knicks vice president Dave DeBusschere said the fines "seem a little lopsided. I imagine (the players) will challenge it by appeal. I didn't think (Ewing) started it."

PATRICK EWING
Did he start it or not?

Ewing was at practice Wednesday at East Orange, N.J., but refused to comment on the fine.

The 7-footer suffered a hyperextended elbow in the fracas and missed Sunday's final preseason game, but he is expected back for next Saturday's nationally televised, regular-season opener against Philadelphia. He did not participate in Wednesday's practice, however.

Brown also was upset over the fine to Sparrow, who dove into the pile and pulled Stipanovich off Ewing.

Brown called Sparrow's dive "a courageous act. Sparrow was penalized for defending a teammate. He separated the two and actually stopped the fight. You really have to question the league for fining Sparrow."

The NBA commissioner's office has taken a hard-line on fighting since 1977, when Kermit Washington crushed the jaw of Rudy Tomjanovich with one punch.

"We've seen what devastating damage these players can do when things get out of hand," Commissioner David Stern said.

Earlier in the exhibition season, Ewing was fined $250 after being ejected for cursing a referee. He also had two other preseason scuffles, one with Buck Williams and Micheal Ray Richardson of New Jersey and another with Tony Costner of Washington.

From certain standpoints, Blackfoot is similar to Twin Falls in Jones' eyes.

"They have decent talent and size, but looking at the film we have seen on them, it all seems to depend on how hard they want to play on a given night," he said. "Last week Borah had them 13-7 at halftime and it was a good game. Then they lost it 37-14."

One thing, Jones assures, is that Blackfoot is never dull.

"They put a lot of pressure on a defense. They run out of the I, split backs, wings, bring a lot of counters and cross action — and they like to throw the ball," he said.

The throwing is done by Wayne Jensen, a converted defensive back, who Jones says "throws the ball well when given time. We have to pressure him."

Blackfoot's most consistent back is Mark Carey, a 175-pound junior, who is at his best in cross-grain running and is the one to watch on misdirection plays.

"I felt we had good overall team defense against Capital. We did a tremendous job of pursuing and flying to the football. I think if we can get the same effort Friday night, our defense would create a lot of problems for Blackfoot."

Blackfoot has secured its playoff berth in Division II by beating Minico and Pocatello and stands 2-6. The Bruins also go in at 2-6.

Jones also announced that next week's game in Idaho Falls against Bonneville has been moved up to 6 p.m. Friday from an original Saturday scheduling.

Elsewhere in the Magic Valley Friday night, Jerome (5-3) can wrap up the District Class A-2 football title by beating Burley (6-2) in Burley. The 7:30 South Central Idaho Conference contest could also affect the SCIC title picture, which will be decided in Buhl at the same hour. League-leading Mountain Home (6-2, 2-0) will take on the Indians (3-5, 1-2) and can claim the SCIC crown outright by winning.

A Mountain Home loss however, would leave the Tigers tied with Jerome (now 2-1) for the title.

Burley is 1-2 in SCIC games this year.

Minico (1-7, 0-6) will wrap up its season Friday night at 7:30 in Rupert by entertaining Pocatello (2-5, 1-5) in a GSC contest.

Kimberly (6-2, 3-2) can win itself a trip to the state Class A-3 playoffs by beating Glenns Ferry (3-4, 2-3) at 7:30 in Kimberly. Meanwhile in Declo, Wendell (3-4, 3-2) can stay in the running for a berth at state by beating the Hornets (4-4, 2-3) in a 7:30 game. A Kimberly loss combined with a Wendell victory would make the Trojans the No. 2 representative from the Magic Valley in the playoffs.

Gooding (7-1, 5-0) which has already clinched the league championship and a trip to state, will host Filer (6-7, 0-5) tonight at 7:30. Valley (4-4, 3-2) will wrap up its season by entertaining Oakley (8-0, 7-0), the Magic Valley Conference champion and the No. 1 team in the state in Class A-4, at 7:30 in a non-conference game.

Elsewhere in the MVC, Shoshone (7-1, 6-1) will conclude its season tonight at 8 in Burley against the Bobcat JVs. On Friday, Hagerman (2-5, 2-4) will visit Hansen (1-7, 0-6) for a 7:30 game, while Murtaugh (3-5, 3-3) will play at Mackay (3-5, 2-4) at 7 and Raft River (4-4, 4-2) will visit Castleford (3-5, 1-5) for an 8 p.m. game.

Carey (4-3, 3-2) will host Camas County (3-4, 2-3) in the traditional season-ending Sawtooth Conference matchup for both teams, scheduled for Friday at 4 p.m.

Jackpot (0-6) is scheduled to conclude its inaugural football season Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p.m. in Alamo, Nev.

Once a longshot, defending marathon champ is worried

NEW YORK (AP) — Orlando Pizzolato of Italy was an unknown and undistinguished runner when he entered the New York City Marathon last year, and he thinks that factor worked in his favor en route to victory.

Sunday, Pizzolato will go into the 26-mile, 385-yard race as the defending champion, and he thinks that might work against him.

"I was an outsider, nobody worried about me," Pizzolato said Wednesday, referring to last year's event, in which he overcame stifling heat and humidity to win in 2 hours, 14 minutes, 53 seconds — the slowest winning time in the New York City race since 1975.

"When I went to the front, they left me without problems. When they recognized me, it was too late."

While the rest of the pack did not try and chase Pizzolato until he was too far ahead, the 27-year-old Italian did have problems — physical problems. Suffering from leg and stomach cramps because of the draining weather, he was forced to stop eight times in the final five miles.

Still, he was able to struggle to his first marathon triumph in 13 races, finishing 43 seconds ahead of runner-up Dave Murphy.

"After every stop, I began to run without problems," Pizzolato recalled. "The last three miles, when I saw Murphy was about 12 seconds behind me, I knew I would win. I was not tired. I drank too much, that's why I stopped so much."

This time, the field is much stronger than last year, and Pizzolato doesn't anticipate that he can repeat.

"It will not be easy to win this year," he said. "Last year, I was an unknown — they didn't know me, so I could go in front of the pack."

Sunday's record field of 19,000 will include Ahmed Saleh of Djibouti, who beat Pizzolato in the World Cup Marathon last April at Hiroshima, Japan, in 2:08:09, the fifth-fastest clocking in history. Pizzolato wound up sixth in a personal-best of 2:10:23, but he ran the second half of the race in a sizzling 1:03:46, making up 51 places after being 57th at the halfway point.

"The Djibouti runner is very, very strong," said Pizzolato. "He can run under 2:08.

"I hope to run under 2:10. Running under 2:08 will be too difficult."

Pizzolato said that in addition to Saleh, his strongest competition Sunday probably would come from Britain's Geoff Smith, the 1983 New York runner-up and 1984 and 1985 Boston Marathon champion; Ron Tabb, the 1983 third-place finisher at New York, and Bill Rodgers, a four-time winner at New York and Boston.

But he added with a laugh, "Outsiders could be the most dangerous. Last year, I was an outsider."

Pizzolato said he probably could have produced an even better time at Hiroshima, if he had not started 205th in the pack in a race that began on the track.

"I started a few seconds behind the other runners," he pointed out. "That cost me some time."

The New York City race will be Pizzolato's second in less than two months. On Sept. 21, in weather conditions that were even worse than New York last year, he won the World University Games Marathon in 2:20:06 at Kobe, Japan.

"I was in shape to run 2:12 or 2:13," he said. "I've had no problems recovering from that race. I'm in good shape."

After his surprising victory in New York last year, Pizzolato returned home to Piovene, Italy, and was given a hero's welcome.

"For everyone in Italy, it was a big surprise that I had won," he said. "When I went back to my little twon of about 7,000 or 8,000, all the people went out on the street for me."

"And on the news, it was the third biggest item — behind the elections, the Pope and then me."

facing Jennie Reese of Coeur d'Alene who was second last year. Winda Bernidetti, Idaho Falls, won the six-th-district title and hasn't beaten Hannah this season.

Twin Falls Coach Duane Stands says his girls' sights remain firmly on Highland, a team the Bruins haven't managed to beat this year.

"But we've been coming closer as the season progresses," he points outs. "We feel that if we can beat Highland or run next to them, we'll definitely improve on our sixth-place finish last year."

Three of the top five from last year's B girls finals return, headed by Jensen. Karen Packham, Kuna, was third and Dana Boyd, Kellogg, was fifth.

Wood River took the B title last year with Jerome in fourth place. Coach Skip Andrew believes that his Tigers will have a chance at winning it.

"We've run against practically all the teams that will be here except for the North Idaho teams and we've beaten them all," he said after winning district. "But it is difficult to figure because we've never had them all in the same race and the displacers and individuals from other schools could turn the scoring upside down."

Magic Valley's A-1 teams, Twin Falls and Minico, are represented only by individuals as neither qualified for the team battle. That should wage between Highland and Meridian with Idaho Falls and Lewiston ringing in as the other district team titlists.

In the B boys division, sophomore Glenn Leavitt of Jerome has improved considerably from his 49th place showing last year. The highest finish returner is Duane West of Middleton who was seventh. Brock Hill, Malad, was 16th while Clint May of Salmon was 23rd.

Spurs threaten action against absent Gervin

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs won't tolerate guard George Gervin's failure to appear at practices, and the National Basketball Association team will "do something about it," Spurs owner Angelo Drossos said.

Gervin did not show up for practice sessions Tuesday or Wednesday, and possible punitive actions include suspension or fines.

"The team cannot and will not tolerate this," Drossos said. "I am very unhappy and upset with Gervin. We will do something about it. We have not discussed suspensions or fines, but when the time comes we'll discuss it."

Wednesday's absence marked the third time during the preseason that the 13-year veteran has skipped practice. He also missed practice Oct. 8 and was 15 minutes late for practice Oct. 2.

"People cannot just come to practice when they feel like it," Drossos said. "He may have a good reason for it. I don't know."

Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said he did not know what Gervin's role would be during the regular season.

"This isn't the first time Ice has missed practice, and I doubt it will be the last," he said.

5-1 Buffaloes spark Colorado grid revival

College football

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The University of Colorado, which hasn't had a winning football season since 1978 and which was a dismal 1-10 last year, is 5-1 this season.

The Buffaloes rank fourth in the country in rushing at 308.3 yards per game, ninth in total defense and first in net punting.

In its last two outings, Colorado has rolled over Big Eight foes Missouri and Iowa State by scores of 38-7 and 40-6. Its only loss came to ninth-ranked Ohio State and that might have been different without four costly fumbles.

There is actually talk about going to a postseason bowl.

"We really need at least two more victories to be in the bowl picture," said Coach Bill McCartney. "If we could beat a team the caliber of Nebraska (on Saturday), we would be a strong candidate — and even have a shot at the Orange Bowl."

A major factor in Colorado's dramatic reversal has been the wishbone.

"Just a year ago, the Buffaloes were the worst rushing team among the nation's 105 major colleges, averaging a meager 59.7 yards per game. More than a few eyebrows were raised when McCartney announced prior to spring practice that he was scrapping his passing attack for the ground-oriented wishbone.

"I felt very confident in making the decision," said McCartney. "We had taken note of the teams in the country that had turned their programs around, and with very few exceptions all had something to do with option football.

"That intrigued me. We flew in option coaches from all over the country to pick their brains. It became apparent that option schemes were the answer, and the wishbone seemed to fit our personnel better than anything else."

"It wasn't as big a risk as it may have appeared. We felt we had the offensive linemen to make it work, and we had some good backs. Our running game looked worse on paper than it really was last year; we were last in rushing mainly because we had so many sacks (in college football, sack yardage is subtracted from a team's rushing total)."

His players took to the new attack enthusiastically.

"Our linemen love it, because now they can fire out and hit people," said McCartney. "They spent most of last year backing up (in pass protection).

"We knew the wishbone would help our defense, because it's a ball-control type of offense that tends to keep your defense off the field. But we have seen an added bonus: in practice, the aggressiveness of our offense has rubbed off on the defense. Our defense has been putting a lot of pressure on the opposition, and the last three teams we've played we've held to fewer yards than anyone else has."

The wishbone has other advantages. Only nine teams in the nation run the wishbone or a variation of it, and the attack is so unique that it becomes difficult for opponents to prepare for it in just one week of practice. Blocking schemes are easier for the offensive linemen. The offensive game plan typically needs only minor revisions from week to week, freeing coaches to spend more time on other matters.

The turnaround wasn't without considerable growing pains. McCartney inherited a bankrupt program from Chuck Fairbanks in 1982, arriving too late in the year to do any recruiting.

His first team went 2-8-1. Next year the Buffs were 4-7, giving cause for optimism. Last year's 1-10 mark raised doubts.

McCartney saw it coming.

"The first class I recruited in 1983, we redshirted them all. We played them all last year, along with the incoming freshmen. We were very young, at some key positions. We just felt that was what we had to do to get better.

Rose's attorney expects Reds to re-sign Pete after Series

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds should sign a new contract with Player-manager Pete Rose, big-league baseball's most prolific hitter, sometime "shortly after the World Series," Rose's lawyer said Wednesday.

Reuven Katz, Rose's lawyer, said the Reds have been "just great" in their approach to Rose in the negotiations so far.

"We're getting along fine and we should be able to conclude it very soon ... sometime shortly after the World Series," Katz said.

"He wants to be back," Katz said of Rose.

Rose, 44, reportedly wants $750,000 for next season to play and manage, up from the approximately $225,000 salary he was paid last year. Katz refused to make any comment on the contract talks or the salary Rose wants.

Reds spokesman Jim Ferguson said Wednesday the club has no announcement to make yet regarding Rose's contract.

In a related development, Reds General Manager Bill Bergesch said the Reds intend to sign a new contract with veteran slugger Tony Perez, who hit .328 last season and split duties at first base with Rose, his longtime friend from Cincinnati's "Big Red Machine" teams of the mid-1970s.

PETE ROSE
Seeks a reported $750,000

Despite the platooning, Rose in 1985 broke Ty Cobb's major-league career record for hits and managed the Reds to their best finish since their 66-42 mark of the strike-shortened 1981 season. Rose, who collected his record-breaking 4,192nd hit on Sept. 11, is considered a candidate for National League manager of the year.

Rose is not attending the World Series. Bergesch is attending the Series, and the Reds-Rose contract negotiations reportedly will not resume until Bergesch returns to Cincinnati.

Rose returned to the Reds as player-manager in August 1984 after having played for them from 1963 through 1978 before departing to play in Philadelphia and Montreal. Under Rose's guidance in 1985, the Reds finished second in the National League West with a record of 89-72 and one tie, an increase of 19 victories over the Reds' 1984 record of 70-92, good for fifth place. It was the biggest improvement in the major leagues.

Katz also is representing Perez, 43, in negotiations with the Reds and has had preliminary discussions with Bergesch. Along with his .328 batting average, Perez hit six home runs and batted in 38 runs while appearing in 72 games.

"The first thing we fix is your peace of mind."

Toronto's 'fall guy' reveals identity

TORONTO (AP) — The mystery is over.

Dan Eddy of Brantford, Ontario has come forward and said he was the fan who fell out of the stands at Exhibition Stadium on Oct. 16 in Game 7 of the American League baseball playoffs between the Toronto Blue Jays and the Kansas City Royals.

Eddy, 33, was seen on network television across North America as he lay prone in the Kansas City bullpen, and then on a stretcher between the eighth and the ninth inning.

Observers had speculated the unknown fan, who refused hospital treatment and promptly disappeared, was drunk.

Eddy finally revealed his identity to a Toronto Sun football writer, at whose wedding Eddy was best man. The solution to the mystery was carried Wednesday under the bold headlines "The Fall Guy" and "The True Story Behind The Big Series Flop."

Eddy said he came forward after a local sports broadcaster called him a "fat, American, drunken fool."

"First of all, I'm from Brantford," said Eddy, an inventory purchaser at Westinghouse in Hamilton, Ontario. "And second, I was pushed."

Eddy said he took the fall from his front-row seat after reaching for a baseball tossed into the stands by one of the Royals' bullpen crew.

"I tried to catch one and this guy pushed me from behind," Eddy explained. "I was stunned a bit.

"Meanwhile, all the people around me were saying that I must be hurt. That I might have broken my neck. And since it would have been kind of embarrassing to climb back into the stands, I just lay there.

"Besides the game was (all but) over and I figured I should play it for all it was worth."

But Eddy said he quit pretending after someone mentioned the word hospital.

"I told them I wasn't really hurt, went back to my seat and watched the rest of the game," he said. "Looking back, it was kind of funny."

Injury may postpone Hagler bout

Boxing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A back injury suffered by Marvelous Marvin Hagler may force the postponement of Hagler's Nov. 14 middleweight title defense against John Mugabi, as well as a bout featuring Thomas Hearns, promoters said Wednesday.

Hagler will be examined again Friday by his doctor and a decision will be made at that time whether to delay the card, promoter Bob Arum said.

Arum spokesman Rich Rose said Hagler suffered a lumbo-sacral strain in his lower back during training this week at his Brockton, Mass., gym. Rose said Hagler's physician, Dr. Louis Abdu, prescribed heat, medication and a short rest period to clear up the ailment.

"From what the doctor tells us, there is some pain, but he doesn't believe the injury is serious," Arum said. "If the fight is to be postponed, the delay will be slight — no more than two weeks."

The card also features Hearns in a 12-round fight against No. 1-ranked middleweight James Shuler — a fight that could lead to a rematch of last April's spectacular battle between Hearns and Hagler.

Arum said last week that if Hearns wins impressively against Shuler and Hagler also wins, the two would meet in a rematch April 14 at Caesars Palace.

Earlier, a spokeswoman at Caesars Palace said the Nov. 14 card was off indefinitely, but Arum called that statement "premature."

"I don't think there is that much of a problem," the promoter said.

Caesars Palace President Don Allison said he has been told the injury is not serious and that the fight will go on as scheduled.

"There's definitely no postponement," Allison said. "We haven't even examined the possibility of other dates. We didn't get to that point."

A postponement of the fight for two weeks would force Arum to take chances with colder weather at the 15,000-seat outdoor arena at Caesars Palace.

It would also bring the fight card precariously close to another Arum promotion, scheduled for Dec. 9 at the Hilton Hotel, just a few blocks from Caesars Palace.

Soccer 'king' Pele still vigorous at 45

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Pele, the retired "king" of soccer, turned 45 Wednesday, still demonstrating the vigor and popularity of his days as the world's greatest player.

"I can still play 45 minutes on any club. I haven't got the speed I used to have, but the ball still obeys me," he said in an interview with the newspaper Jornal do Brasil of Rio.

Pele spoke to reporters during a break in the shooting of a publicity film in Rio's Maracana Stadium, the world's largest and the site of many of his memorable performances.

Retired from soccer since 1977, he warned Brazil about its lack of preparation for the 1986 World Soccer Cup in Mexico.

He said Brazil's veteran stars should get in shape for the tournament because "fame doesn't win a game, much less the World Cup."

Now a businessman and actor, Pele spends much of his time in New York and only occasionally comes to Brazil.

Small-college kid sneaks up on NCAA touchdown record

College football

PLYMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — National recognition doesn't come easy playing for Plymouth State College, unless you do what Joe Dudek is about to do.

With 65 touchdowns, Dudek is just one shy of matching Walter Payton's National Collegiate Athletic Association record.

He will go for it Saturday when the Panthers play Bridgewater (Mass.) State.

With three games left, he also has a shot at Wilbert Montgomery's overall collegiate record of 70, set in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics school.

"I can't say I'm not excited about it," Dudek says. "When it comes, I'll celebrate with the team."

His parents and friends from Quincy, Mass., his hometown, will be coming to see the game, and that along with the sudden publicity is making it a pressure week, but Dudek is enjoying the attention.

"I'm having the time of my life up here," the senior fullback said Tuesday. "I have no regrets about going to school here. I've had more press recognition here than I ever would have gotten at a big school."

But his 4,727 yards rushing, an NCAA Division III record as is his 65 touchdowns, still don't answer questions about how good he really is. He probably won't get that chance unless he gets into a postseason all star game or until a National Football League team drafts him in the spring and he goes up against the big school players in summer training camp.

"Scouts have talked to me and say I have the tools, but I have to gain 10 or 15 pounds," said Dudek, who weighed 168 as a freshman and now is up to 190 on a 6-foot-1 frame. He also must increase his speed, now 4.5 for 40 yards.

"He could really blossom in the pros with a team that can give him a chance," said his coach, Jay Cottone. "Coming from a small college hurts him a bit. Any kid from a Division III school is a question mark."

Payton came from Jackson State, a school with a football reputation, and was the fourth player drafted overall in 1975 by the Chicago Bears. He went on to break the NFL all-time rushing record last year.

Montgomery did what Dudek will try to do. He came from Abilene Christian College and was drafted in the sixth round in 1977, and became a star for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Cottone thinks Dudek has the instinct, vision, balance, power and shiftiness to impress the pros, if they give him a chance in training camp.

Harry Buffington, director of NFL Scouting Inc., a scouting service for 19 pro teams, said his service had looked at Dudek four times, an indication that the scouts think highly of him, and that he is "going to be well looked at" by NFL teams.

Reports from last spring projected Dudek as a fourth, fifth or sixth round draft pick, "maybe higher if his production is up this year," Buffington said.

After averaging 122 yards a game and scoring 17 touchdowns as a freshman, Dudek raised his production to 135 yards and 16 touchdowns as a sophomore and last year ran for 138 yards a game and a record-tying 21 scores.

This season, while breaking the NCAA Division III rushing record of 4,631 yards set by Rich Kowalski of Hobart, Dudek has run for 812 yards and 11 touchdowns, or 116 yards a game.

Gooding, Filer will go tonight

GOODING — Gooding High School's Canyon Conference football game against Filer, originally scheduled for Friday night, has been moved up to tonight.

The 7:30 p.m. contest will be the regular-season finale for both teams.

The game was moved in order to allow Gooding students to attend the state Class A-3 volleyball tournament in Nampa, which starts Friday.

Two Twin Falls bowlers place

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls bowlers Karen Poe and Nita Ott placed in a 600-club doubles bowling tournament in Boise last weekend.

The tournament, for bowlers who have bowled 600 series, was held at Westgate Lanes.

Poe and Ott finished third in the tourney with a six-game score of 2,419. Poe combined with Jackie Thomas of Boise to take second place with a score of 2,454. The tournament winners were Johnna Dunten of Boise and Lolita Gabiola of Kuna.

Poe bowled her first 700 series in the tournament, scoring a 720 with a high game of 279.

Combined with Ott, Poe's average was 222, while Ott averaged 189. In tandem with Thomas, Poe averaged 190.

Area cowboys rise in rankings

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Mickey Young of Jerome and Rob Juker of Buhl moved up a couple of notches in their specialities in the latest rankings released by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

Kent Cooper of Malta remained in 10th place in his specialty in the latest standings released by the PRCA.

Young moved up two spots in the bareback rankings, from 17th to 15th. He has earned $25,0111 this season, a little less than than $40,000 less than the event leader, Lewis Feild of Elk Ridge, Utah.

Juker improved from 13th to 12th place in the PRCA steer wrestling ratings, with earnings of $26,765. That's about $37,000 behind the event leader, Marty Melvin of Holabird, S.D.

Cooper is ranked 10th in saddle bronc riding in the ratings, which are based on money earned. He has made $35,287 this season, $20,000 less than the event leader, Bud Pauley of Shepherd, Mont.

Plenty of ISU-UI tickets left

POCATELLO — Idaho State University said Wednesday that plenty of tickets remain for Saturday's Idaho State-Idaho football game.

ISU Minidome ticket manager Barbara Hart said about 3,000 seats remained unsold in the 12,000-seat stadium.

Immigration raids race track

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Immigration officers raided dormitories at Santa Anita race track in the predawn hours Wednesday and arrested "a couple of hundred" illegal aliens who work as grooms and exercisers, authorities said.

A similar raid two months ago at the Del Mar track in San Diego County prompted a one-day protest walkout by trainers, but Santa Anita officials said the raid would have no effect on the nine races scheduled Wednesday.

Warriors' Short to state case

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Purvis Short, one of the Golden State Warriors' several absentees, will state his case in a news conference on Thursday, the day before the Warriors' opening game of the National Basketball Association season.

Short, the forward who ranked fourth among NBA scorers last season, left the Warriors early this month after playing in the first two exhibition games. He is holding out for a contract extension. Chris Mullin, the team's top draft pick, has not been signed yet, add veteran forward Greg Ballard will open the season on the injured reserve list because of a knee problem.

McGee, Mattingly top players

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Sporting News has selected St. Louis Cardinals' center fielder Willie McGee and New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly as the 1985 Major League Players of the Year.

The weekly publication also selected Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets as National League Pitcher of the Year and Bret Saberhagen, who pitched the Kansas City Royals to a 6-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in Game 3 of the World Series Tuesday night, as Pitcher of the Year in the American League.

Washington to enter program

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — Atlanta Braves right fielder Claudell Washington was ordered by a judge to submit to a drug diversion program, rather than go on trial on charges of marijuana possession, the Municipal Court's clerk's office reported Wednesday.

The terms of his duty in the program will be reported later, said criminal division clerk Susan Null.

According to the Contra Costa County district attorney's office, the county probation department told Municipal Court Judge Joseph Longacre that Washington, who has a previous problem with drugs, was suitable for the program, which includes classes on the dangers of drug use.

Seahawks think image is smarting

Pro football

SEATTLE (AP) — The president and general manager of the Seattle Seahawks says the National Football League team is being made to look like the guys in the black hats in contesting favorable treatment for the Seattle Mariners in their new Kingdome lease.

"We're being painted back into the corner as the bad guys," Mike McCormack said Tuesday. "We either must accept this, we either swallow this pill or we're being made the ones responsible for the Mariners leaving."

George Argyros, owner of the American League baseball team, says financial problems with the club make it imperative that they get a new lease agreement for the domed sports arena or they will have to look at moving the team out of town.

The Seahawks must approve several elements in the Mariners' proposed new Kingdome lease by Dec. 31. The Kingdome is owned and operated by King County.

Sam Sperry, a spokesman for King County Executive Randy Revelle, said Tuesday night that county officials are eager to resolve problems with the Seahawks.

McCormack said the Seahawks are "very, very concerned" with the loss of an estimated 795 choice football seats as a result of a proposal to replace bench seats with theater-type seats in part of the stadium.

The Seahawks also are concerned about their continuing scheduling conflict with the Mariners and the split of revenue from the proposed luxury loge boxes being planned for the Kingdome.

The difference in funds from concessions, parking and VIP boxes among NFL teams is 22 percent to 25 percent, or a $10 million difference between the teams with the best and worst financial standings.

Steelers admit cutting drug users

Pro football

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers, have cut players known to be using drugs, club President Dan Rooney says.

Rooney would not name the players or the seasons involved. Asked if it has happened in the last decade, he said, "Probably in the last to obviously more so in the last five."

A Steelers' player admitted having a drug problem. "We would first send him to our doctor, who's one of the foremost alcohol and drug physicians in the country," Rooney said earlier this week in an interview with the Beaver County Times.

"The doctor would evaluate him. We would take his recommendation about what should be done, whether it's to put him in rehab, counsel the player, monitor him and let him play, whatever.

"So the first thing we would do is get the player the help — at our expense — but it would not be totally (based) on what the doctor said. We will make a decision on whether we should release the guy. We are in the football business. If we feel he will be a problm for us, he won't be on the team. One thing we know about the people who take drugs is that you can't depend on them," he said.

"We feel our responsibility is to the football team, to the sport. We're not in the business of rehabilitating everybody. I think you have to realize that there are people who are beyond help," Rooney said.

National Football League players must submit to one drug test each year when they take their preseason physicals and a team can require a test of any player suspected of drug use.

Steelers quarterback Mark Malone said the NFL should take a hard-line policy against drugs.

Geese!

Snow, which hunters might soon encounter, provides contrast against this hunter's decoy spread (left). During opening weekend, however, fields looked more like the one above

Opener: 1 down, 2 down — that was the shoot

By MIKE HARROP
Special to The Times-News

Dawn slowly dragged itself onto the Camas Prairie near Fairfield with exaggerated motions.

Waiting in the blinds for the geese to fly, I tried to tell myself that we had a good chance on this opening morning of goose season.

But no amount of self-delusion could hide the fact that other hunters had moved onto the field sometime after midnight, countering my guarding the site until 10 p.m. the night before.

And by the time the sun rose, six decoy spreads shone with frost and two fenceliners were half-hidden on the outskirts of the feeding area.

We didn't really have much of a chance. The geese would probably go into the site they habitually used. And that site was occupied by someone else.

Having gained permission for the shoot was cold comfort now as the sun dragged itself into the sky and geese began talking among themselves on Mormon Reservoir, a mile or so away.

We were located 100 yards from the site which geese had been using the previous week, but goose droppings and ample spilled grain showed that geese had used our site earlier this fall.

Generally, Mormon's geese don't fly until the sun hits the water, a farmer and goose hunter who's lived on the prairie for years told me.

As the sun rose over the mountains, the frost began to melt, and someone spotted the two geese winging straight for our set.

We hid in the blinds, everyone putting their heads between their knees and remaining motionless as I watched the birds.

When several hunters share a set of decoys, only one should watch the birds come in. That way, there's less movement in the blinds and fewer pairs of eyes staring up to frighten the birds away at the last moment.

About 50 yards out, the geese began dropping, then set their wings and began a glide that brought them in over the easternmost blind.

As the birds closed to 15 yards of the blinds, I called for shooting, and one bird dropped immediately. Although rocked by pellets, the other bird flew away, then swung over one of the other sets in the field where he was downed.

And that — with the exception of watching other flocks flared away by skybusters or shot by other hunters — was the goose shoot.

Our decoy spread was bigger and of higher quality than those of our competitors, but we lacked one element for a really good day.

We were set up in the wrong place, with too much competition from hunters in the right locality.

One goose makes it a successful shoot though. For some reason, one bird among five hunters is immensely better than getting skunked. I'm not sure why, but that's the way it always seems to work out.

Our hunt could have been more successful if we'd have been able to set out decoys where birds are used to coming in. And in reality, that's the first and most important law for using decoys.

Obviously, geese like to come in where other geese have already landed, if only because it's a feeding area is probably safe. But watching flocks also contain geese seeking mates, and a group of strange new geese may look like a singles bar to some flights.

Even if geese swing over your decoys in a sense of neighborliness — to see who's just moved into the neighborhood; it matters little at all as long as they come.

But when geese are resident to an area, they become highly traditional as to their selection of feeding sites, flight lanes and resting areas.

Unless driven from an area by hunting pressure or food shortages, geese will remain in the area they're accustomed to using. They become creatures of habit until the onset of winter forces them to move. Then, they begin to behave like migrants, although they may have moved less than 30 miles.

In a way, a new hunting development may have proven our undoing.

The new development — a portable blind shaped like a giant goose decoy — kept our preparations for the hunt to an hour or two and eliminated digging or building blinds in the field, which saved half the previous night.

But saving sleep in this case meant that someone else got to the feeding field first and aced us out of the right location.

You can bet that I'll be getting my sleep in the feeding field in the future when there's any possibility of competition.

Canada geese are usually hunted in the stubble fields.

There are at least two good reasons for this.

First, shooting geese on the limited amount of water available for the resting flocks makes them migrate farther south much earlier.

And second, it is difficult to build a blind in the marshes that will fool geese more than once.

Good goose hunters like to take advantage of the daily feeding patterns of geese.

Generally speaking, geese will rest on reservoirs and large rivers where they're safe from approach.

Just after dawn and just before sunset though, they fly to traditional feeding fields where members of the group have fed safely before.

Even migrating geese will use the same feeding fields year after year, depending upon feed availability. But if land use changes, geese often won't stop to feed.

In that case, they'll look for a new field.

If you set up decoys in any old field where you can get permission, you might get some shooting from flocks looking for new feeding territory, but you'll probably strike out.

However, if you've taken the trouble to locate the feeding field that geese are using, you'll have a much better chance of a successful hunt.

A secondary location might be on the flyway between the water and the feeding field. If you are fortunate, such a secondary location will work out when you can't get permission to set up in the feeding field itself. That's the kind of location I used opening day at Fairfield. And while it wasn't as good as a primo location setup, we did get some geese into the blinds.

Eastern hunters happy to wing it

By ANGUS PHILLIPS
The Washington Post

Canada goose season opens Friday in Maryland, and all across the Eastern Shore, except where Bill Sayler holds sway, hunters will be hiding in damp little holes in the ground, squawking out goose sounds on wooden calls.

Not at Sayler's place. "If somebody brings a goose call to our blind we shoot it," he said.

He won't hide, either. At 6 feet 7, Sayler stands up tall when geese are flying around and waves at the birds like an airport traffic director bringing in a 747.

He's a true believer in a relatively new tactic for hunting Canadas, about 1 million of which spend the winter eating corn and soybean spillage on the Delmarva Peninsula. He and his three sons run a guide service called "The Flaggers." Instead of tooting on goose calls, they flap home-made styrofoam wings at passing flocks to lure them into range, and apparently it works.

Sayler, a student of such things, is convinced lack of motion on the ground is what scares geese away from conventional decoy sets. "Look at these birds," he said as he punched up a videotape of Canadas in a field. Sure enough, every few seconds one or another stretched its wings and flapped. Some even hopped off the ground.

"That's what we're trying to duplicate," he said.

Over the last 10 years he's built electrically powered flapper decoys, waved nylon flags and silhouette decoys over his head and even flown goose kites. Finally he designed the setup he thinks works best; a pair of plain, black, 3-foot-long styrofoam paddleboards with handholds, which he waves overhead until the instant it's time to shoot.

It might sound ridiculous, but hunting tapes Sayler made outside his blind all end pretty much the same way — with vees of geese shearing off big flocks and heading like homing pigeons for his spot.

Sayler admits last season was not his best. That was true across the goose fields of the Eastern Shore as unfavorable weather and wary geese combined to make life difficult for commercial guides.

But the hard times did nothing to shake his confidence in flagging, and he'll be hard at it again this weekend.

If flagging works it could be a boon to goose hunters like me who hate hiding. Normally, a paying gunner has to stay down in a covered pit all day while the guide watches the sky and works flocks with his call. When a few birds do get in range, the guide throws off the top of the blind and the gunners rise up, half-blind and bewildered. It's less than thrilling.

Much of the joy of goose hunting is watching the birds, anyway, which Sayler lets his parties in on. "I want my gunners standing up and ready when geese are flying," he said. "It scares the birds when three people jump up at the last second. They're going to flare off. But if you're flagging, you can stand there waiting and they come right in."

Bucks-only success hovers around 12%

JEROME — Hunter success for Magic Valley's general bucks-only season in the northern units of the region ran about 12-13 percent over the first five days of the season.

Armed with statistics gleaned at two checking stations, Region 4 Wildlife Manager Craig Kvale said three days of checking saw the percentages dwindled until the last of the skunked hunters came out Sunday evening.

Early results on Unit 43 (South Fork of the Boise) had 91 hunters with six deer, or 12 percent. Unit 48 had 592 hunters with 79 deer, or 13 percent, and unit 49 had 425 hunters with 52 deer for 12 percent.

"The percentages at both stations stayed around 20 percent through Wednesday and Saturday but then dropped throughout Sunday," Kvale said.

He added "the last time we had checking stations here, the units were open to either sex hunting so we really can't compare."

Telephone surveys, conducted in January and February, indicated last year's success ratios for the three units was "20-plus percent," Kvale said. He said he anticipated the success rate would increase with this winter's telephone survey.

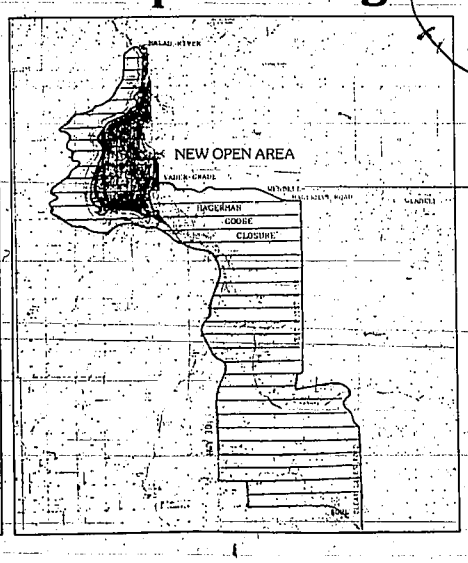

Kvale said he took a quick sampling of the harvest for unit 49 (Little Wood) and found yearling bucks made up 73 percent of the kill. "That's right up there compared to our controlled hunts where it is about 50 percent," Kvale said. "I don't think it is excessively high."

There had been some sportsmen question about the antlered-only hunting in the areas cutting heavily into the mature buck population.

Kvale said field checks indicated that unit 46 (Three Creek) lost most of its hunting pressure after the first couple of days. The Sublett Unit was yielding 15-20 percent sucesss. Those two were the only general hunts in the south.

Kvale reminded hunters that the either sex hunt in unit 43 started Wednesday and runs through Sunday. As of Monday, it will revert to bucks-only and continue through conclusion Nov. 10.

'Hot spots' for geese to open Saturday

JEROME — Magic Valley's two goose-hunting "hot spots," Mini-Cassia and Hagerman Valley, will open Saturday, probably to better reviews than before.

While the area's other top goose producer, Camas Prairie, opened a week ago, the two goose herds nearest the area's population are given the few days of protection. And since duck hunting will have been legal for two weeks, the geese should be a little hunterwise.

Craig Kvale, Idaho Department of Fish and Game, says the major harvest should be provided by resident geese and that number will be augmented and diffused somewhat by the arrival of northern migrants within the next month or so.

"From every census indication we had last spring, this area continues to enjoy increased goose populations on both the Snake River and the Camas Prairie," Kvale said.

"We are receiving reports from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and other agencies that our primary goose-migration sources, Montana and Alberta, also had good reproduction and we might see a few more geese come in with the northern flight."

Things remain pretty much in place concerning closures from last year with one major exception in the Hagerman Valley.

Kvale said some concern had been expressed by Hagerman area hunters that opening a portion of land between the Snake River and U.S. Highway 30 from the Owsley Bridge to the Malad River would make serious inroads in the resident herd.

But Kvale said depredation problems along with the geese becoming "too tame" figured into the department's final determination.

The Hagerman Closure is bounded by Clear Lakes road and West Point road on the east, Wendell-Hagerman highway and Vader grade on the north and U.S. highway 30 from Buhl to Owsley bridge.

The closure continues on the west side of Snake River from Owsley Bridge north and west to the Malad River, roughly including all land in the Belle Rapids reclamation project.

No hunting is allowed on the river proper.

The Mini-Cassia closure includes the Snake River and 600 feet from the highwater line on each side from Milner Dam to Meridian Road on the Minidoka side and 650 road in Cassia County.

Kvale said the goose season will run through Jan. 5. Goose hunting will be allowed during the first two weeks in December when duck season closes to form the split.

Bag and possession limit is two geese, including any species.

Sand Creek wildlife area manager retires

By CATHY KOON
The Associated Press

PARKER — It's been said publicly and often that if it weren't for Dick Wilson there wouldn't be a Sand Creek Wildlife Management Area.

The Bruneau native was manager of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game facility from 1952 until he retired a few weeks ago, after 36 years with the agency.

Seated on the sofa in the Fish and Game Parker headquarters home where he and his family have lived since it was built about 1973, Wilson, 61, looks out the window at the sagebrush-covered desert that marks the edge of the Sand Creek WMA.

"There's been a lot of ups and downs in the past 30 years . . . but I'm not sorry to retire. I'm ready to retire. I'm ready to do something else," he says.

The hardest part is moving away from his children and grandchildren and leaving behind his friends and colleagues.

"This is the end of an era. Nothing will be the same here," he says quietly.

The Sand Creek game refuge was established in 1947 on nearly 5,000 acres purchased from Edgar Chapman. Today, the 26,914-acre park is known as a wildlife management area.

Wilson went to work for the Fish and Game department in 1949 for $1 an hour. As part of a construction crew, he worked on the initial development at Sand Creek and several fish hatcheries, including American Falls, Grace and Hagerman.

Wilson says he spent three summers at Sand Creek before he received a provisional appointment in 1952 as refuge manager. The following year the appointment was made probationary and in 1954, permanent.

The Fish and Game life is hard on families, he says. Although assigned to Sand Creek, he worked on projects throughout the state so he was away from home for long periods. Even his work on the refuge kept him away for days or weeks at a time. He was always late for supper, he recalls.

He says he was a land manager and a farmer. He raised grain for the wildlife, leaving it standing in the field for the elk and birds. The fields are now planted to hay. He was a caretaker for the ground, developed water systems and rode fence.

He also was an authorized enforcement officer. He says he's probably best recognized sitting on a Caterpillar. He and his D-4 worked on habitat improvement at Grace, construction at Mud Lake, ponds at Emmett and dikes at Market and Mud lakes.

He did most of the work building four ponds and a reservoir at Sand Creek for waterfowl habitat.

"We went from little or no fishing on the area to about 10,000 people a year," Wilson says. The waters are stocked with rainbow and eastern brook trout from state hatcheries.

Migrating ducks, geese, sandhill cranes and a few trumpeter swan use the ponds each year. Wilson says there is some resident population of the birds.

Wilson initiated use-trade agreements with local stockmen that are credited with allowing the build-up of the Fremont County elk herd. They also won him the Presidential Award of the American Society of Range Management in 1970.

Wilson says Fish and Game bought the Chapman land because the elk wintered there. He estimated the herd size at 40 or 50 head in 1947. The herd began to grow as the Harriman family increased its herd on the Railroad Ranch in Island Park, and the Fremont County Sportsmen's Association bought elk from Yellowstone National Park.

Sand Creek was opened to hunting, and the elk quit migrating through the Chapman segment and winter on some of the use-trade areas, he says. The elk move out of Harriman State Park and Yellowstone National Park and onto the desert in about a day.

Wilson and his family lived at Sand Creek year-round for three years, but the hard winters forced him to move into St. Anthony so his children could go to school.

He says his leaving is hard for his children who consider Sand Creek their home. The family spent as much time as they could at the home there. His wife, Rose, was considered by many to be co-manager of Sand Creek until her death in 1981.

Four of his five children live in Fremont County and all work in timber or wildlife jobs.

He remarried in 1982. He and Marie were high school sweethearts separated during World War II. When he returned to Bruneau after serving in Europe, he was told she had married. She had moved to Nampa and gone into nursing. She had never married.

After his first wife died, he learned Marie was in Nampa and called her. They rekindled their romance by telephone and were married later.

Mrs. Wilson says her biggest adjustment wasn't to being married. After 35 years as a nurse and "living a life of regime," she found it hard to deal with being a Fish and Game wife. "There's nothing routine about Fish and Game life," she says.

From west to east, opener for pheasants bad, worse

JEROME — Magic Valley's pheasant season hit probably a 10-year low although success seemed considerably better on the west and waned as one progressed east.

Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said the Minidoka area, usually the best producer, drooped to .31 birds per hunter and 12.3 hours per bird over the two days of the first weekend. That was the only area serviced by a full-time checking station.

However, just as noticeable was the decrease in the number of hunters processed at the point. The department counted 270 hunters with 85 birds in 1,047 hours.

"That is about half the success rate of last year both in birds per hunter and hours per bird. And last year was the worst in at least 10 years," Kvale said.

"However, some of the other areas held up very well," Kvale said. He noted the big game checking station at Timmerman Hill processed 68 hunters from the Wood River area who came into Lincoln and Jerome counties for the pheasant hunt.

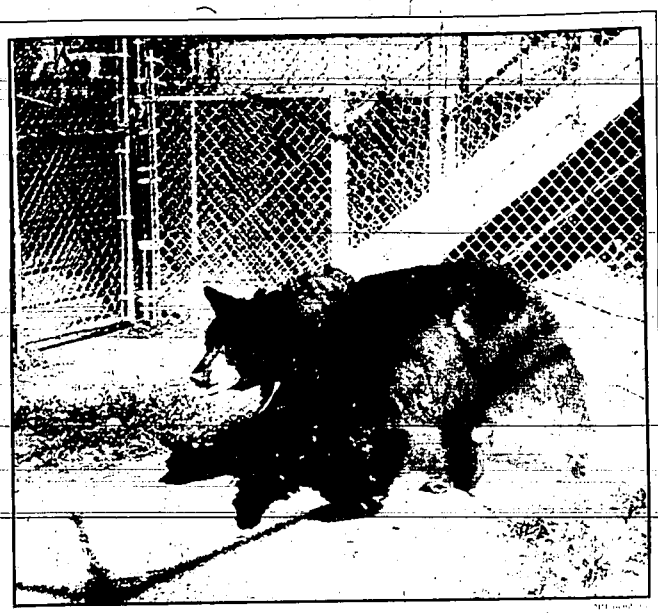

"Those 68 hunters had 55 birds for .81 birds per hunter," Kvale said. "Our field personnel making bag checks in Jerome County turned up average of .6 to .9 birds per hunter so generally, hunting was a little better in the western part of the region."

Kvale had predicted that the pheasant hunting would be off previous years, an accumulation of three hard winters.

"Our early indication is that we came into this nesting season very low in breeding populations and if we had a good hatch — as the weather indicated we should have — there simply weren't enough nests to do that much good," Kvale said.

Kvale said some of the hunters had suggested — sometimes forcefully — that the season should be closed immediately. This flies in the face of several extensive studies that have indicated that hunting has minimal effect on pheasant populations and that habitat and weather have more impact.

"Fortunately, most of the hunters we talked to agreed that the amount of cover, particularly the woodier vegation that would provide some thermal protection during these harsh winters, has declined conspicuously over the past few years."

Lonely prisoner

Other prisoners of Creston, Iowa's Union County Jail are content to leave the facility's exercise yard-to-fellow-inmate "Bear-Bear," a four-year-old, 200-pound black bear. The pet bear was incarcerated after complaints it was escaping from its cage and roaming neighborhoods. The former owner has been charged with cruelty to animals. The bear's wounds are from a recent foray.

Groups appeal caribou transplant

BONNERS FERRY (AP) — Two opposing groups have decided for different reasons to appeal a U.S. Forest Service decision to proceed with a controversial caribou transplant program.

The Boundary Backpackers, a Bonners Ferry-based conservation group affiliated with the Idaho Conservation League, filed an administrative appeal last week in which the group says the Forest Service should begin the project earlier than the proposed November 1986.

The Bonners Ferry Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution to also appeal the ruling which allows the transplant of caribou from British Columbia to the Selkirk Mountains of Northern Idaho and Eastern Washington.

The Forest Services has proposed bringing 12 caribou, an endangered species, to the area over three years.

In letters to Forest Service Chief R. Max Peterson and Regional Forester Jim Overbay, the Backpackers protested the time frame. The program, they said, should start next month.

"We feel the Forest Service has yet to give us a good reason why they aren't going to begin this fall," said group spokesman Jerry Pavia.

The caribou were placed on the endangered species list in January 1983.

Yellowstone officials consider some winter use

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Yellowstone National Park officials are thinking of opening the Canyon Village and Grant Village areas to winter use, park planner Bob Brockwehl said Friday.

The consideration is part of an overall review of Yellowstone's winter use policies, he said.

The growing increase in the number of winter visitors to the nation's oldest park spurred the review. In the early 1970s winter visits annually totaled about 40,000, but during the winter of 1981-82 more than 104,000 tourists trekked to Yellowstone, officials say.

Now, Brockwehl said, about 4 percent of the park's annual use comes during the winter months.

The planner said a draft of the use plan, which should be ready to release to the public for comment by March, looks at additional areas that could be opened.

"We're thinking about which areas should be opened for winter use. That's the principal problem that should be considered for the future," he said. "The principal constraint is the existing facilities that can be winterized. Most of them are not winterized. The one's that have been used at Old Faithful and Mammoth (Hot Springs) have been winterized to some extent."

Brockwehl said there really isn't a need for additional winter lodging. When Mammoth Hot Springs opened for the winter three years ago it added 130 units to the 90 available at the Old Faithful complex, he said.

"That was a sizeable increase," he said.

Along with considering what facilities might be opened, the review also looks at which roads might be opened to automobile traffic and the regulation of visitor use to avoid impacts on vegetation and wildlife, the planner said.

Since 1965 snowmobilers have used the park's road network, but Brockwehl said not all of the roads are being used and so some might be closed.

A 17-mile stretch of road between Canyon and Tower Junction has received little use, he said. There also has been talk of opening 21 miles of road between Mammoth Hot Springs and Norris to automobiles, said Brockwehl.

Still another aspect under review is the park's fall and spring closing and opening dates.

"One of our main problems has been the shoulder seasons, or off seasons. Typically, that's after most of the lodging in the park is closed and weather is starting to get bad and driving conditions are starting to get bad," Brockwehl said.

"We've always had quite a bit of pressure to keep the park open as long as possible, so there could be some adjustments to opening and closing dates."

The majority of the park usually closes for the winter on Nov. 1 and remains shut until May 1, although the park's interior road network remains open for snowmobiles, he said.

Deadly mistakes

When hunters are mistaken for game, results can be terrifying

By CHARLIE MEYERS
The Denver Post

Even after a week of contemplation, nothing about the episode seems real. Except the hole in Garry Rudd's leg.

A sharp stinging sensation "like an electrical shock." A thrashing sound in the bushes nearby. The glimpse of a man in a camouflage suit running full tilt in the opposite direction.

Only then did Rudd realize the awful truth. He had been shot by another bow hunter and left to fend for himself.

For Rudd, who has hunted with a bow for 26 of his 41 years, Saturday, Sept. 14, dawned full of promise. From his camp at Laramie Lake in northern Colorado near the Wyoming border, he had risen early, pulled on his hunting gear and selected a route which would take him south along the edge of the lake. With the first rays of sun streaking through the surrounding evergreens, he already had seen several deer and was in the process of beginning a stalk.

"I was moving along very quietly on the outside of the willows around the lake feeling very good about the day," he remembers. "I figured with a little luck I'd have my deer early and get back home to my wife."

But luck and Rudd were to be stark strangers that day.

"I saw something flash through the brush, and at first I thought it was a bird. Then I felt the sting and saw this guy running away. I got a pretty good look at him. He was only about 60 feet away and running like a deer. I think he knew he hit me."

For any hunter, it is the most frightening — and disgusting — thing that could ever occur in the field. Mistaking another human for a game animal and shooting at him is the worst possible breach of the hunting ethic. Any hunter who would take a brush shot, firing blindly at an unidentified motion or sound in the forest, is considered the lowest form of outdoor life.

He also is a potential felon. Reckless endangerment, the act of threatening the safety of another person, is a crime punishable by imprisonment. To wound someone and flee compounds the felony. Whoever shot Garry Rudd and ran away is as much a fugitive from justice as an armed robber.

Because of the logistics, the distance involved, most mistaken-for-game incidents occur among rifle hunters, although the law requiring the use of flourescent orange has resulted in a drastic reduction. Yet this is the second time in three years that a Colorado bow hunter has been shot by another's arrow.

"Garry could have bled to death very quickly without assistance," said Bob Caskey, director of the Colorado hunter safety program. "If the shot had come in the side of the leg instead of the front-and-hit-the-femural-artery, there's no way he could have stopped the blood on his own."

Chiefly through Caskey's efforts, Colorado recently began to require archers as well as rifle hunters to complete a safety course.

Still, the law didn't help Rudd. A Vietnam veteran wounded in action, Rudd has received Emergency Medical Technician training and once taught first aid to Boy Scouts. As he demonstrated quickly, he is very capable of helping himself.

"I cut my pants open with my hunting knife and by then the wound was bleeding so profusely I couldn't tell much about it," Rudd said of the wound caused when the arrow passed completely through his leg. "Then I took my bandana and wrapped it good and tight right on the wound. By then it had begun to hurt quite a lot, but I wasn't so concerned about the pain as I was getting it taken care of."

The walk back to his Jeep was nearly half a mile, but, although he was able to further inhibit the bleeding with gauze and duct tape, his problems didn't end once he got there. The vehicle works with a clutch, and the wound was in the left leg.

"I mostly stayed in first gear until I got to the highway," said Rudd. "Also, I know how to jiggle the gears a little to get them to shift without the clutch."

Rudd originally had planned to go to a hospital, but he began having second thoughts on the one-half hour drive down the winding road leading to the nearest hospital.

"My wife is going to have a baby in a couple of months. I was afraid if someone called saying I had been shot and was in the hospital, she might get really upset. So I decided to drive on home."

Once there, Rudd waited several hours for his wife to return. By then, the pain had subsided and the bleeding had stopped completely, and Rudd confesses that he considered trying to hide the severity of the situation from her.

"After a while we took a look and I was amazed at the size of the wound. You could have dropped a banana in there."

The shot caused extensive muscle damage and ricocheted off the bone, but caused no permanent damage. After being stiched up, Rudd was back at work on crutches and by the end of the week was able to hobble around. He expects the leg to be well in three months.

104-year resident's spirit still lives in Magic Valley

Early settlers knew him as early as 1875. He was then a grown man. The citizens of Twin Falls buried him in 1925 at what was an estimated 104 years old.

Swen

This drawing of Rock Creek Jim was made from a hospital photograph taken in 1925 in Twin Falls

Indian Jim and/or Rock Creek Jim roamed Magic Valley for years. When the U.S. government established reservations, Jim refused to become a ward of the government and lived for years in or around the area.

Jim, like other members of the Shoshones, was a polygamist. In the written accounts and in my interviews over several years with people who knew Jim, only two at a time.

One account of how Jim wooed a young beautiful Indian maiden comes from the journals of C.S. Walamont: "When one of Jim's squaws was taken to the happy hunting ground he immediately began the courtship of a beautiful young squaw who seemed to repulse him. He resorted to the old custom of displaying blankets. Every morning he would hang out a blanket of gaudy color and, adding each morning to the number until the besaughted squaw was overwhelmed, went to his camp, took possession of the blankets, made her bed and became a member of Jim's household."

During the 1970s, memories of Jim in our community were renewed when some young men found a skeleton at Whiskey slough near Salmon Falls reservoir. It was found along with some horse bones and saddle and bridle remains.

The sheriff of Twin Falls county is Jim Munn. He was about to send the remains to Boise for analysis, when Fred Craig, Twin Falls, called his office and told what he knew of Indian Jim and his family.

A burial for an Indian, at the time, was to place them in areas such as the rock crevice, along with some of their belongings, to help them in the next life. In the case of his 14 year old son, Jim had killed his horse and dropped in a few of his son's belongings.

Over the years that I have researched Indian Jim, I have been told that other children were buried in graves by white settlers all over our valley, including two who are buried near Roseworth reservoir.

Events changed Jim's life, like our own. At one time in Jim's life, he had a small cattle operation in a flat on Salmon Falls creek, just upstream from the present dam. It provided a grassy meadow, protected from the harsh winds, and a suitable place for a few horses and cattle.

An early settler named George Clark wanted this piece of land, and traded Jim an iron cook stove for the land.

Jim loved the cast iron cook stove, but found that moving the darn thing made moving a problem, so he settled for a long time near Cedar Creek.

Oliver Ingram and his wife Joann of Twin Falls have sought the home of Jim, and tell me they now know where it is. Others have given me the same general description of just where he lived this part of his life.

During these years, Jim ran a few head of cattle on the open range and raised hay to feed these cattle during the winter. During round-ups, Jims' cattle were seperated by the settlers and returned to him.

It was during his stay at the Cedar Creek area that Jim had one of his most famous wifes, Maggie. Maggie was married to a medicine man from the Fort Hall reservation and during a family quarrel shot her husband. She rigged the shooting as suicide. Her mistake was to plan the shooting to look like he shot himself in the belly, but the bullet hole was in her husband's back. The tribe tattooed her with three marks on her face, chin and each cheek to indicate her crime.

Maggie then took up with another reservation Indian, but did not get along with him either, and eventually a brother of Indian Jim introduced the two and off went Maggie to join the family.

To rid herself of the reservation husband, Maggie went into Rogerson and asked a woman who ran the store to write a letter for her. The story goes like this: Maggie asked "you write me letter?"

"What do you wish to say?" asked the store keeper.

"Me Maggie, me quit,".

As Maggie got older, she became very heavy and when she became sick and about to die, Jim prepared a place for her by digging a dug-out a distance from his home on Cedar Creek. Jim had a problem getting Maggie to the chosen burial site. He could not carry her, so he put a rope around her and saddled his horse and tied the rope around the saddle horn and drug her to her burial place, while still alive. The trip did Maggie in and she was dead by the time Jim got her to the site.

With 104 years as a resident of our valley, the history of Indian Jim and the interviews I have had about his life is much too long for a newspaper column. If you have information I can include in my files about Indian Jim, please write me in care of The Times-News.

Indian Jim and his son are buried in the Twin Falls cemetery, with the headstone donated by the 1925 residents of Twin Falls.

Earlier hunt drawing planned

BOISE — Earlier-controlled hunt drawings for some species will be held next year to give successful permit holders more lead time for planning their trips.

The proposal is included in updated five-year management plans approved by the Fish and Game Commission. They would move up the application-selection process for moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goat permits to April 30. Successful applicants for those species will be notified by mail no later than June 1 — about two monthers earlier than in past years.

But hunters need to be aware of another change in ctrolled hunt regulations.

You may apply for only one of the three species (mmose, mountain goat or imountain sheep). If you apply for any of those permits, you may not apply for deer, elk or antelope permits in later drawings.

The commission adopted 1986-90 management plans for moose, antelope, bighorn and mountain goat.

Harvesting moose, bighorn sheep or mountain goat in Idaho continues as a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

Here are some of the highlights in each plan:

Moose

Continue to evaluate the feasibility of more hunts and slightly higher harvest rates; set priorities for moose transplant sites and locate sources of transplant stock. Population goal is to increase from 4,500 this year to 5,140 in 1990.

Bighorns

Retain the three-quarter curl and four-year-old requirement for legal rams but consider an "any-ram" season on a trial basis in one hunt; maintain an annual harvest of nor more than 15-20 percent of observed legal rams per management unit. Population goals would increase from the 1985 estimate of 3,600 to 4,600 in 1990.

Visitors continue flocking to SNRA

KETCHUM — Visitor use on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area has remained high for the year just ended, according to Allan Ashton, SNRA superintendent.

The number of recreationists recorded for the year compares closely to 1984. The figures are less than those turned in in the peak years of 1977 and 1978.

Family camping in developed campgrounds showed the greatest increase in participation. Cross country skiing on prepared tracks remain constant.

There appeared to be a slight drop in use of "general undeveloped areas." The last category includes hiking of skiing off trails, snowmobiling, dispersed camping, Christmas tree cutting, nature study and similar activities outsde of developed sites.

Unlike previous years, the SNRA experience fire closures outside of developed recreation sites during parts of July and August. This was a contributing factor to the decline of use in this category.

A rise was recorded in the use of recreation roads. There was also a small increase in the number of people using lodges and resorts.

The total number of visitor-use days for 1985 stands at slightly more than 1,051,000 compared with a little over 1,052,000 in 1984. A visitor day is defined as the time spent by one person engaged in recreation for 12 hours of that of 12 people recreating for one hour.

According to Ashont, statistical evidence is not sufficient to identify trends. However, 1985 was a big year for campers in the Sawtooth NRA.

Five-week fly-tying course, limited to 14, starts Nov. 6

TWIN FALLS — Ruel Stayner will conduct a five-week fly-tying course in conjunction with College of Southern Idaho.

The classes, which will include all phases of materials, selection and application involved in dry, wet, streamer and nymph flies, will emphasize flies which have proven effective locally.

The class, limited to 14 students, will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. on five consecutive Wednesdays, beginning Nov. 6. Registration will be taken at the Taylor building records department.

PROTEAN PROTEIN AT SWENSEN'S

According to those old High School Health Classes, protein makes up one of the basic food groups we can't live without. But that's no problem, because protein comes imbedded in so many textures and flavors that are so much fun to eat, appealing to every taste and appetite and also satisfies the universal human desire to spend money and save money at the same time through the medium of Swensen's low protean protein prices this week.
